Italy Accepts Anglo-French Peace Basis, London Hears

Paper Says Way Is Clear for Talks; Step to Ban Oil Is Dropped.

League Meeting To Be 'Formality'

Britain Modifies Terms of Bid After Attacks on First Plan.

The Crisis Abroad.

Premier Mussolini has accepted as a basis for peace negotiations a revised Franco-British plan dispatched to Rome, Addis Ababa and Geneva, according to the London Daily Mail's correspondent in Paris. Premier Laval, reported to have received word of acceptance from Rome, is understood to be seeking delay on oil embargo action by the League.

A day of diplomatic confusion saw the British government revise the original plan when it met a storm of opposition in Parliament, even in the cabinet itself.

A serious situation developed in Geneva, where smaller powers were reported angered by the peace plan, as described in unofficial reports.

By the United Press.

London, (Wednesday), Dec. 11.—Italy has accepted the Franco-British proposals to solve the Italo-Ethiopian war as a basis for peace discussions, the Daily Mail's correspondent at Paris reported authoritatively today.

Premier Pierre Laval reportedly received intimation from Rome of Italy's acceptance, the dispatch said.

It is understood, the correspondent reported, that the French government is of the opinion Thursday's meeting of the League committee of 18 will be purely formal, without discussion of a possible oil embargo against the Fascist State. The meeting probably will be adjourned sine die, the dispatch said.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 10.—Diplomatic sources tonight said Premier Laval, informed from Rome there was "every chance" that Premier Benito Mussolini would agree to negotiate for an Ethiopian peace, would ask that discussion of an oil embargo against Italy be postponed at Geneva.

These persons reported the French and British had agreed to ask the League of Nations committee of five to handle the negotiations.

The oil embargo discussion now is scheduled for Thursday by the League's sanctions committee of eighteen. It was reported Laval and Anthony Eden, of Great Britain, would discuss the method of procedure with Salvador de Madariaga, head of the committee of five which formulated previous peace proposals, when the three meet tomorrow night en route to Geneva.

Il Duce Informed.

A revised Franco-British peace plan was dispatched officially tonight to Rome and Addis Ababa, capitals of the warring nations. But it was reported Il Duce had received a resume of the main points of the original proposal Sunday and that word of his probable acceptance was received shortly thereafter in Paris.

Laval, in announcing that France and Britain are in "perfect accord" on the text of the plan, said France had agreed to accept "minor changes" made by the British cabinet.

Main lines of the revised plan were reported authoritatively to be:

An Ethiopian outlet to the sea through the port of Assab, Eritrea.

Tigre province to be given to Italy with the exception of the holy city of Askum and a strip

$2,000,000 Given to Harvard To Found Government School

Lucius Littauer, Former Member of Congress, Tells of His Aims.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 10.—Harvard University announced tonight the gift of $2,000,000 for establishment of a graduate school of public administration.

The donor was Lucius N. Littauer, of New York City, 76-year-old glove manufacturer and former Republican United States Representative, who six years ago gave away $1,100,000 "to promote the general moral, mental and physical improvement of society."

In announcing the gift to Harvard, President James Bryant Conant said Littauer's declared purpose was promotion of the "science and art of government administration," and the improvement of "public administration — Nation State and local—for the welfare of our people."

Coincident with announcement of the gift, President Conant appointed a commission, headed by President Harold W. Dodds of Princeton University to make a comprehensive report on university education for public service.

The group will recommend plans for the organization of the school established by the Littauer gift.

The gift, said the University's announcement, contemplates the building of a headquarters for the school to be known as the "Littauer center of public administration," with three-fourths of the gift reserved for endowment.

"For some time, Harvard has had under consideration plans for edu-

Tokyo Demand Is Checkmated At Navy Parley

4 Powers Surprise Japanese by Giving Tonnage Dispute Priority.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 10.—Delegates of four powers, in a surprise agreement with Japan today, squarely met the major obstacle of the international naval conference by placing the question of total tonnages on the program as the first order of business.

This issue is the danger point of the deliberations, because it contains Japan's demand for naval equality with the United States and Great Britain and the scrapping of the ratio system.

Quick acceptance of Japan's request for immediate discussion of the tonnage issue left the Orientals momentarily nonplused. They had expected the British to challenge their views in an effort temporarily to sidetrack the grave issue.

Tonnage Demands Asked.

Instead, however, today's session, the first business one, was reported to be notably decorous and businesslike, with no hint of the clash of views which is known to lie ahead.

The development, however, did not mean that either Great Britain or the United States is giving in to Japan's equality demands.

This fact was made plain by a reaffirmation of British opposition to the so-called common upper limit plan, asked by Japan.

The conference, in which France and Italy are participating, asked the Japanese delegation to submit a detailed statement of its total tonnage demands. Work was begun on this and it will be submitted tomorrow.

Japanese Concession.

Japan, it was understood, will advise the conference that total tonnage limitation agreement, in which the principle of equality of the fleets of the three principal naval powers would be recognized, is the first and paramount necessity for the country.

Tokyo is willing, it was said, to enter a drastic scaling down of tonnages on the principle of equality. But President Roosevelt's proposal to scale down proportionately the treaty tonnages on the present ratio basis would be wholly unacceptable, the Japanese say.

The Japanese, it was understood, will tell the conference that settlement of the tonnage dispute would permit them to agree to widespread limitation of the size and armament of individual ships, even to the abolition of offensive types.

Because of the day's developments informed persons expressed belief the success or failure of the conference will hinge about deliberations of the next few days.

Mrs. Bergdoll Plans Picketing Of White House

Philadelphia, Dec. 10.—Mrs. Grover C. Bergdoll, wife of the draft dodger, today said she would "camp in front of the White House" with her five children if her plea for a Presidential pardon for her husband is not answered soon.

The girl Bergdoll married after he fled to Germany revealed that she wrote a third letter to President Roosevelt yesterday, asking him to let her "know one way or the other" about the pardon.

"If I do not receive a definite reply in the very near future, I intend going down to Washington and 'camp' with my children in front of the White House until I get a yes or no answer," she said in a letter to the United Press.

White House Reply.

"I most certainly mean it," she asserted when asked about the letter. Mrs. Bergdoll revealed the answer from her first plea to the President. She received it from Marvin R. McIntyre, White House Secretary.

The answer said:

"Your letter of August 17 addressed to the President has been received. The suggestions urged by you have been placed before the Attorney General for appropriate inquiry and report. As soon as definite action is taken, you will be advised."

In her third, and perhaps final, written plea, the pretty blond, 28-year-old wife told the Chief Executive that "up to the present moment, I have not received any information as to what, if any, action has been taken by you."

Faces 5-Year Term.

Mrs. Bergdoll came to the United States with her children last May, leaving her husband in Weinsburg, Germany, where he fled in 1920 after his conviction of draft evasion.

A fifth child, Vega, the only one who can claim American citizenship, was born in Philadelphia in September. Mrs. Bergdoll and the children have been living here with Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, the draft dodger's 76-year-old mother.

Bergdoll faces a five-year prison term. He evaded the draft in 1917, was tried and convicted in 1920, but escaped to Canada and later to Germany.

Cuban Army Joins in Search For Kidnaped Multimillionaire

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Dec. 10.—Cuba's army headquarters tonight threw 4,500 police and soldiers and 300 army intelligence agents into a search for Nicolas Castano, Havana millionaire, who was kidnaped from a highway yesterday.

The soldiers and police were assigned to various residential and suburban sections and told to search every nook and corner for trace of the missing capitalist.

Determined to block payment of a ransom, Lieut. Col. Jose Pedraza, chief of the national police, directed a vigorous hunt for the kidnapers' hideout.

Army leaders were known to fear that any ransom money paid might find its way into the hands of revolutionaries, and be used to purchase arms.

The banker, importer, sugar-mill owner and lumber operator was believed to have been abducted while motoring on a highway between Havana and Cienfuegos.

There were unconfirmed reports that the kidnapers had demanded a ransom payment of $300,000. Castano's fortune was estimated by a reliable source at between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000.

A screen of official secrecy was thrown around the case, and newspapers did not publish a single line about the abduction. Police refused to discuss it.

London Crash Shakes World Silver Market

U. S. Treasury Ceases Bids; Dealers Look For American Aid.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 10.—The London silver market, swamped by huge quantities from the Far East with no buyers, collapsed today with little hope of solving the situation unless help comes from America.

Dealers were bewildered by the sudden turn of events, which saw operations suspended and the market finally closed without a price being fixed. They stayed late in their offices, still hoping to receive offers to buy from the United States.

Dealings were suspended and at 2 p. m. brokers announced the doors would reopen at 4:15 p. m., but they remained closed.

The spot price was below 29 pence per ounce for the first time since last April.

"We are completely in the dark," one of the biggest dealers said. "Without American offers to buy, it its impossible to do business and impossible to say what the future will be. It is an extraordinary situation and one we have not previously experienced."

Speculators were concerned over the possibility that Washington does not intend to continue its silver purchasing policy.

Brokers anticipated possible repercussions in silver shares on commodity markets at tomorrow's opening.

Under rules of the London exchange all silver offered must be taken at the price fixed by the market. Dealers today barricaded themselves and refused to fix a price, fearful of a sharp slump in the face of lack of American support.

Markets Demoralized

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—World silver markets were demoralized today, with offers flooding the market and no buyers, as the U. S. Treasury apparently refused to bid for metal in the face of Far Eastern selling orders reported to total 20,000,000 ounces in London alone.

That historic market, for the first time brokers could recall, failed altogether to post a price for the white metal, while in the Montreal

Tampa Boycott By A.F.L. Urged In Labor Protest

A movement was started here last night to have the American Federation of Labor stay away from Tampa, Fla., in 1936 as a protest against the kidnaping, tarring and flogging of three labor men there the night of November 30.

The A. F. of L. voted last September to hold its next national convention in Tampa.

Murray Baron, of New York, representative of the Labor and Socialist Defense Committee of the United States, arrived here last night by airplane and said he would ask William Green, president of the A. F. of L., to recommend the convention not be held in Tampa.

He said James Myers, chairman of the committee on social affairs of the Federal Council of Churches, would come here today to join him in his plea. The two of them, he said, would also talk to Senator Robert Wagner (Democrat), of New York, labor's champion in Congress, who is expected here today.

Deficit Slash To a Billion Held '37 Goal

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although no specific figures have yet been computed, the belief exists within Administration circles that President Roosevelt plans a big surprise for the country when he presents to Congress in January the Federal budget for the 1937 fiscal year, which starts next July 1.

The surprise, it is whispered will consist of an estimated deficit for the 1937 fiscal year of not much more than $1,000,000,000, or about one-third of the revised estimated deficit for the current fiscal year. Indeed, should the President bring the budget that closely into balance, the Treasury will be aproximately back to the first year of the depression.

Hope of a deficit for the next fiscal year comparatively so small springs from the widespread business and economic improvement this fall and the belief that it will continue through the next calendar year. This means that the President not only can feel free to reduce estimated expenditures for relief and emergency purposes, but that he can count on increased revenue from income as well as miscellaneous taxes, not to mention increased repayments to Federal lending agencies.

Deficit Cited.

Returning to the White House yesterday morning from a swift but crowded day of speech-making in the middle-west, the President took up the budget as his first major task in preparing for the Congressional session which will convene in three weeks.

He summoned Daniel Bell, acting director of the budget, who informed Mr. Roosevelt of the progress made in estimating expenditures and receipts for the next fiscal year. Neither the White House nor Mr. Bell gave any indication of what had transpired in the conference.

But that was regarded as a part of the President's strategy to infuse an element of surprise into the figures when they are laid before Congress. Mr. Roosevelt is anxious to veil his budgetary plans in secrecy. In doing so he ridiculed all predic-

Belgian Airline Plane Crashes; 11 on Board Die

By the Associated Press.

Tatsfield, Kent, England, Dec. 10. A Belgian airliner, its wings coated with ice, crashed in a valley today and 11 persons were killed. It was one of the worst civil air disasters ever to occur in Great Britain.

The craft, forced low by the ice formations, struck the top of a hill, zigzagged into the valley and crashed with terrific force.

A villager who ran to the scene said: "Everything was smashed to pieces. The bodies were terribly mutilated."

The only woman passenger, a German, was decapitated.

Seven of the victims were passengers and four were members of the crew. The plane was flying to London from Brussels after crossing the English Channel, battling rain and a high wind.

One of the two or three Britons killed was Capt. Sir John Valentine Carden, 43, a well-known designer of airplane engines which bears his name. As a technical director of Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd., he designed many British army tanks.

Drive to Legalize 'Mercy Killing' Organized at Rally in London

Church Vicars, Doctors and Lawyers Lead Move to Launch Crusade for Action in Parliament, Public Education on Need for 'Easy Deaths.'

By the United Press.

London, Dec. 10.—Frocked vicars of the church, famous medical men and lawyers met in the great hall of the British Medical Association tonight and organized a crusade to legalize "mercy killings" in Great Britain.

The Voluntary Euhtanasia Society, born amid a storm of protests, will sponsor a bill in Parliament to permit so-called "easy death" for persons suffering from painful and incurable diseases.

At tonight's meeting in Tavistock Square—the outgrowth of demands first raised 62 years ago in England—it was announced that an educational campaign would be carried on throughout the United Kingdom. Two hundred sympathizers were enrolled on payment of five shillings each.

Lord Moynihan of Leeds, former president of the Royal College of Surgeons, presided, and announced that he, personally, will place the euthanasia proposals before the House of Lords.

"The relief of human misery is the world's great humanitarian challenge today," Lord Moynihan said. "It is true that at the present time many sufferers do end their lives, but as the law now stands they are guilty of a felony—suicide.

"Furthermore, anyone, whether it be doctor, nurse or friend, who aids them is liable to a charge of manslaughter, if not murder."

Coroners' courts, it was pointed out, usually returns verdicts in these cases of "suicide while of unsound mind" and attach stigmas to the sufferers' deaths.

"If voluntary euthanasia were legalized and the proper safeguards set up, as we propose, this stigma would be removed," Lord Moynihan said. "Indeed, euthanasia soon

Stanley Reed Taken Ill In Highest Court Plea For New Deal Policies

Counsel for Government Collapses Before Supreme Bench.

Justices' Questions Had Been Constant

Former Senator Pepper Utters Prayer Against Regimentation.

By Robert C. Albright.

Battered by a steady flow of Supreme Court questioning, Solicitor General Stanley Reed, carrying the burden of the Government's defense in two pivotal farm law tests, dramatically collapsed in the courtroom yesterday at the close of a day's strenuous arguments.

Sudden illness of the chief of New Deal legal forces came as the climax of hearings on AAA processing taxes and the Bankhead cotton control law, which previously reached an impassioned peak in a whispered prayer by former Senator George Wharton Pepper, counsel for Hoosac Mills.

The court had closed arguments in the AAA case, with Pepper assailing the act's legality, and Reed contending it valid. It had passed on to hearing the Bankhead law arguments, and Reed was winding up the Government's case. The court already had shown impatience with one of the Government's contentions, and was questioning the solicitor closely on the second.

Adjournment Advanced.

Reed was talking in a low voice, and appeared slightly unsteady on his feet. Suddenly his words trailed away:

"I'm afraid I must ask the court's indulgence, and ask——."

He sat down and raised his hands to his head. The packed courtroom remained quiet for a full minute. Then Chief Justice Hughes tapped the gavel signifying adjournment. It was 4:15 p. m. It is not the custom of the court to adjourn before 4:30.

Mrs. Reed moved swiftly to her husband's side. Spectators remained standing in the courtroom, aware that something had happened, but not knowing just what. Two uniformed guards helped the stricken Solicitor General to his feet, and assisted him to the marshal's office. There he rested about 20 minutes. He was given coffee, and later returned home. Mrs. Reed said he was feeling better then.

Over-Exertion Blamed.

Associates attributed his fainting spell to overwork. Reed has borne the brunt of the landslide of New Deal test cases, with Constitutional challenges running the gamut of AAA, the Bankhead act, TVA and countless processing tax suits.

Hardly less dramatic was the closing appeal before the undemonstrative justices earlier in the afternoon by former Senator Pepper. Pepper appeared to have concluded his arguments for invalidation of AAA processing taxes, when unexpectedly he told the court he wanted to inject a "personal note."

"I have tried to argue this case dispassionately," said the Hoosac Mills counsel in a voice that hardly rose above a whisper, "as is the duty of advocates before this court, but I do not wish your honors to believe my feelings are not involved.

Former Senator's Prayer.

"My emotions have been deeply stirred. I believe I am pleading the cause for the America I love, and I pray Almighty God that not in my time will the land of the regimented be substituted for the land of the free."

Pepper had risen to oratorical heights in his earlier statement and the nine justices had listened in silence, not once interrupting his flow of argument, which struck repeatedly at the "scheme" he said was behind the AAA act—"a scheme that must fall once it is demonstrated that this tax is clearly for regulatory purposes."

He pictured the farmer as on an "auction block," with both Federal and State governments "bidding" for his allegiance, and finally "selling his freedom for a mess of pottage."

"This is not a voluntary plan," he insisted. "It is a method of compulsion that is a good deal more effective. It is easier to compel through the use of liberal sums of

President Resigns as Upshot of Quarrel Over Procedure.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Dec. 11 (Wednesday)—President Carlos Mendieta resigned early today as the upshot of a raging political quarrel over election procedure.

Havana, Dec. 10.—President Carlos Mendieta, it was learned in reliable quarters late tonight, has called a special session of the cabinet to offer his resignation.

Palace attaches were unable to locate a cabinet quorum immediately.

The disclosure that Mendieta intended to resign followed his cancellation of a radio broadcast to the United States in which he was expected to present his side of a bitter quarrel over election procedure.

The powerful Menocalista Party, headed by Gen. Mario G. Menocal, twice president of Cuba, had refused to participate in national elections next month unless Mendieta resigned. Other parties have supported the Menocalista position.

Mendieta's government recently set elections for January 10 in adopting a formula suggested by Dr. Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University.

If the president carries out his intention to resign he will be suc-

U. S. Considers Plan to Build 2 Airports Here

Washington's 10-year dream of a thoroughly modern airport that will hold its own with other world capitals appeared a step nearer reality yesterday when the Department of Commerce revealed its intention of proposing construction of two Federal commercial airports just outside the District with WPA and PWA funds.

The plan was disclosed by Assistant Secretary J. M. Johnson in a letter to Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, who was chairman of last year's sub-committee that investigated airport sites in and around Washington.

Explaining that the Commerce Department did not want to conflict with the House District sub-committee, Johnson said the Commerce Department stood ready to request an allocation of funds for the purchase and development of Washington Airport and Hoover Field and the more gradual development of Gravelly Point as well.

These two sites have been the center of a decade of controversy and have brought about a deadlock which has blocked any definite legislative action.

Johnson said that the time is approaching when air commerce to Washington will reach such a volume that separate airports will be needed for air liners and private planes. It is therefore necessary to plan for two airports instead of one.

The Department of Commerce plan, he explained, would be to obtain either WPA or PWA funds for the purchase of Washington Airport, and then to use relief labor under WPA for its development. The project, he predicted, could be completed within six months.

Gravelly Point then could be developed over a three-year period with additional WPA or PWA allocations.

Johnson said he understood that Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, has already expressed his interest in the proposal and indicated his willingness to allot funds if available.

Representative Randolph, who immediately indorsed the proposal

Berry to Form Council Despite Industry Snub

By Felix Bruner.

In spite of refusal of most business interests to co-operate, Maj. George L. Berry, Federal industrial co-ordinator, yesterday announced he intends to go ahead with formation of a council for industrial progress. The council will make recommendations concerning future relationship between Government and business.

Actual formation of the council was postponed until some time next week, following appointment of representatives of 13 union labor groups to serve as members. A check-up yesterday indicated that 15 industries will be represented on the council. In some instances the council members will represent industries as a whole and in others only small units within industries. None of the country's major manufacturing groups will be represented.

As the industrial and labor conferences were concluded, the American Federation of Labor estimated that industry had created 5,657,000 jobs between March, 1933, and October, 1935, and of these 4,174,000 were created between March and September, 1933, during the period when NRA codes were put into effect and the President's re-employment program had the co-operation of industry.

The A. F. of L. report marked resumption of its employment statistical service, which had been suspended while the system of gathering figures was revised. The labor organization found that there was a larger decline of employment up to the low point of the depression and a larger increase during the last three years than previous figures had indicated.

The federation found that in March, 1933, a total of 15,470,000 persons were unemployed, while the number last October was 11,650,000. The federation estimated that 600,000 persons reach an employable age each year. This accounts for failure of unemployment figures to drop in proportion to the number of new jobs created.

At the peak of the boom year, 1929, a total of 2,000,000 were without jobs, the federation found. The A. F. of L. saw cause for alarm in

'Anonymous,' Toy Fund Friend For Years, Helps Swell Gifts

A standby of the Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund made an appearance at headquarters of the fund yesterday afternoon.

It was the anonymous giver, a good friend of the Post Toy Fund since it was started several years ago.

Yesterday "Anonymous," whose number is legion, made his first gift of $10. A short time later he was back again with other gifts of $2 and $1. Following "Anonymous" came 5-year old Jimmie Melsness, of 1118 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Jimmie left a much-prized dollar for the Post Toy Fund and with it his sincere wishes "for a Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year to all the kiddies of Washington."

And the same to you, Jimmie! You have done your bit and may open your own bulging stocking on Christmas with a clear conscience knowing you have made some needy child of Washington happy with that dollar gift to the Post Toy and Doll Fund.

The Christmas snowball of good will, which The Post Toy and Doll Fund piles up each year, grew much larger yesterday with the arrival of $24.50 in money gifts and about 300 toys from kind-hearted Washingtonians.

Silver Market Breaks as U. S. Ceases Bidding

London Mart Suspends Operations; Swamped by Far East Orders.

futures market most deliveries were off around the full 5 cents an ounce permissible under trading rules. December delivery, not subject to the limit, lost 7.8 cents.

The New York commercial quotation for imported bar silver, after several hours' delay, was finally fixed by Handy & Harman at 63¾ cents an ounce, off 1 cent from Monday.

Silver circles said the impasse at London, with repercussions in other centers, including a break in metal shares on the New York Stock Exchange, appeared to be the result of the recently adopted silver nationalization policy of the Shanghai and Hongkong governments in China.

Linking Currencies.

Their attempts to acquire foreign exchange for linking their currencies to the pound sterling were said to underlie the heavy silver offerings today.

In foreign exchange dealings at New York the Honkong dollar dropped to a new low of 33.25 cents, down .05 of a cent. The Shanghai unit, however, remained unchanged at 29.95 cents.

The Treasury, it appeared to Wall street silver experts, had simply withdrawn its bids for metal in London, rather than take the enormous amounts of silver offered in connection with the Chinese currency plans. This was swelled later by the frantic attempts to dump silver by international speculators.

It was pointed out that the buying of the United States fiscal authorities had been the only important support in international markets for many months, as they attempted to carry out the provisions of the silver purchase act.

The law authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver until the price should reach $1.29 an ounce or the stock of silver held should total one-third of the monetary gold stock.

Fulfilling Provisions.

By the Associated Press.

A spokesman for Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury "is still fulfilling the provisions of the silver purchase act."

Herbert E. Gaston, Morgenthau's assistant, made the statement to newsmen, when asked for comment upon the collapse of the London silver market due to lack of buyers. For months, the United States has been the principal purchaser of the white metal.

The silver purchase act to which Gaston referred directs the Government to buy the metal until silver prices reach $1.29 an ounce or the monetary stock is one-third of the gold supply. While the direction is mandatory, its administration is discretionary with the Secretary of the Treasury. No time is set for achievement of the goal.

Press Conference.

Gaston made this statement when urged that Morgenthau hold a special press conference for a discussion of the silver situation:

"If it is for the purpose of discussing silver, there will be no conference. The Treasury is still fulfilling the provisions of the silver purchase act, and will not discuss day-to-day developments in the world's silver markets, nor tactics we will employ in meeting the situation."

Morgenthau was closeted with President Roosevelt late in the afternoon, presumably on budgetary matters.

Collapse of the London silver market was hailed by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, as "the finest thing that could happen from the standpoint of eventual stabilization of world currency."

Thomas, formerly an advocate of swifter Treasury buying, said "Things are different today and other nations are playing right into our hands."

He added that a world monetary conference with only Great Britain, France and the United States participating, would stabilize currencies for the whole world and bring about a tremendous improvement in international trade.

"No Cause for Alarm."

At Reno, Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, said he saw absolutely "no cause for alarm" in the current "bear movement" in silver, and asserted America's silver purchase policy "is working entirely satisfactorily and the President has never considered changing it."

Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and an influential member of the Senate "silver bloc," indicated British economic and financial policies were to blame for yesterday's collapse of trading in the London silver market.

Rising Prices Scuttled NRA; The Consumer Problem; A Policeman's Duties.

By Raymond Clapper

THE Administration has been unbelievably blind in perceiving what really killed NRA and what deadly force is obstructing its efforts to find a formula for perpetuating the fundamental idea of the recovery experiment.

NRA was not killed by the Supreme Court decision. Business had largely withdrawn its support before that. The NRA was a hollow shell by the time the Supreme Court finished it off. The idea behind NRA had already died.

Apparently not realizing that, President Roosevelt sought to revive the idea under some other formula. He was confident that business wanted to continue the idea of Government-partnership with industry. The opposition was represented as coming from a small minority of chiselers. Studies were begun to collect evidence which would support a fresh attempt at substitute legislation. House and Senate committees were asked to prepare new bills. Maj. George Berry was put to work at recovery headquarters to rally sentiment.

Throughout this period, business protested that it did not want NRA revived. The protest increased in volume and recently reached almost hysterical pitch, coming to a rough-house climax when the opening session of Maj. Berry's recovery conference broke up in noisy protests against further Government interference with industry.

The idea of NRA has been scuttled not primarily by politics, nor because of theories of individualism, nor opposition to regimentation. It has been scuttled by rising prices. The Administration's success in boosting the price level killed its key recovery experiment.

NRA was launched while prices were going down. Big business men, Republicans, Tories, rugged individualists, welcomed NRA. The hard-shell textile industry was the first to sign up, the industry which is at this moment in the Supreme Court leading the battle against AAA.

Originally NRA appealed to industrialists as a means of checking the falling prices which were ruining them. They welcomed it because it would put the Government on their side against the price cutter. Competitors were stopped from selling below cost. Only one paper of matches could be given away with a package of cigarettes. Retailers who offered low prices were in trouble. Even the collective bargaining provisions were tolerated by many anti-union employers because they worked in the direction of checking price cuts based on slashes in labor costs.

But after the dropping price level had hit bottom and was moving upward, and particularly after it gained real momentum, businessmen had less need for NRA's protection. As the prospect for future price advances continues, they are more certain than ever that they don't want the Government as a partner. Whereas once they needed its protection, now they want to be let alone.

During the period of its hey-day, NRA failed to give attention to the interest which might have saved it when this inevitable change in the price direction should arrive. That was the consumer interest. Labor and industry ran NRA, but consumers were frozen out. The Consumers Advisory Board was pure window dressing. It was not allowed inside the outer offices of NRA.

Thus NRA lost the opportunity to build itself on a three-legged support and chose to stand on the support of business and labor. Consumers never felt that their interests were bound up in NRA. When business deserted, only labor was left. Labor still is supporting the basic idea but is under no illusions. Long ago it threw its support to more promising measures, such as the national labor relations act and the Guffey coal act. Inasmuch as labor was induced to abandon insistence upon the Black 30-hour week bill when the NRA was offered to it with the backing of industry, there is now the prospect that labor again will turn to this weapon as a means of reducing the lag between business recovery and re-employment.

Now the Government is face to face with the consumer problem. Prices are running up rapidly. Food is up almost 40 per cent since 1933. Rents are 16 per cent higher than two years ago. These two items account for more than half of the average family's expense. General living costs are up 17 per cent from April, 1933. Although still 16 per cent below 1929, costs are rising rapidly enough to indicate that the situation presses increasingly for Government attention.

It is this that gives bite to Senator Borah's demand that the monopoly question must be faced.

In view of industry's uncompromising opposition to revival of any Government partnership with it, the natural tendency will be for the Federal Government to revert to the policeman role contemplated under the Federal Trade Commission. It will devote itself to attempting to enforce free competition as a means of holding down prices.

This is difficult with industry organized on its present large scale, often controlling sources of raw materials, and by one device or another frequently maintaining firm control over large sections of the industrial machine.

Originally this Administration apparently regarded this as an outworn mode of price regulation. But as conditions have developed, it appears to be the only one left to it for the time being.

Maj. Berry, with his recovery conference, did not set out to prove this, but that's what he has done.

Billion Deficit For 1937 Held Roosevelt Aim

'Surprise' for Nation Seen in January; Would Cut '36 Figure a Third.

President's Plan.

The President, however, is earnestly seeking to bring his next budget as closely as possible into balance, not only for the sake of good administration, but because he knows that Federal "spending, waste and extravagance," as his fiscal policy is summarized by his foes, bids to be the chief issue against him in next year's Presidential campaign.

Little in the way of reducing expenditures can be accomplished in the regular departments of the government at this time, it is claimed. In that section of the budget expenditures may show an increase over the current year, although the President while at Warm Springs revealed he had turned down requests for $400,000,000 additional from these departments.

The hope of reducing expenditures lies in the recovery, relief and emergency agencies, which this fiscal year will spend $4,154,824,000, according to the September 29 revised budget estimates. The level of expenditures in the 1937 fiscal year will depend on the extent the President can cut that figure.

In some quarters it has been suggested that this figure would be cut at least $1,000,000,000; others within the Administration believe that in view of increased employment a reduction of $1,500,000,000 could be made. It is doubted, however, that the figure for recovery expenditures will be reduced below $2,500,000,000 for the next fiscal year.

Income Taxes Lag.

In estimating probable revenue, the President and his aids are confronted with the fact that receipts from income taxes drag from three months to more than a year behind actual earnings. Thus, taxes paid on incomes earned this year will be reflected in Treasury receipts on March 15 and June 15, of this fiscal year, and September 15 and December 15 of the next fiscal year. Taxes on next year's income will form a part of the following year's receipts.

A hint as to what the Treasury expects in the way of revenue was given, however, in the President's revised budget estimates on September 29. He increased his revenue estimate for this current fiscal year $478,000,000 over his estimate of last January. This increase was based on improved economic conditions—increasing employment, wages and profits—as well as larger purchases of commodities subject to Federal taxes.

The revised estimates did not show how much of this increase was allocated to income taxes. But since the major part of it was under the heading of "internal revenue," it is safe to assume that a good part of it was due to anticipation of larger income taxe collections, based on this year's earnings. Since that figure would be reflected only in the first half of the next fiscal year it must be given almost as much weight in computing revenue for the next budget as for the current fiscal year.

Expectations that economic improvement will continue next year would permit the experts in preparing the 1937 budget to count on almost twice as large an increase as that made in the revised figures, or approximately $800,000,000.

Assuming that this reasoning is approximately correct, it was pointed out, the President would be in the position of bringing his budget, on the basis of figures recited, within $1,400,000,000 of being balanced, or one-half of the Federal deficit in the fiscal year preceding the 1932 Presidential election.

Bonus Not Included.

These computations take no account of allowances for repayments to Federal lending agencies, nor does it include any new appropriations such as that for cash payment of the bonus. No reference to the latter is expected to figure in the budget while allowances for recoverable assets may further decrease the prospective deficit.

When business and industry are on the upward grade, accumulative forces work to bring about a balanced budget. The need for expenditures grow less and, just as important, revenue rises. Former President Hoover suffered his first deficit of $903,000,000, not through any great enlargement of expenditures but through a shrinkage of revenue, while only about one-fourth of his second deficit of $2,885,000,000 was due to increased expenditures over the previous year. In the years preceding the depression, the Treasury invariably failed to keep abreast of revenue in its estimates.

President Roosevelt spent the day studying this budget situation and catching up on his correspondence. Besides Mr. Bell, his only other callers were Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, a luncheon guest, and Frank C. Walker, director of the National Emergency Council.

Taber Voices Doubt.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, yesterday predicted that the Administration would not come within a billion dollars of balancing the "ordinary" expenditure side of the 1937 budget.

In addition, he asserted there were "no indications that the Roosevelt Administration believes it necessary to balance the budget." He estimated regular appropriations would exceed $5,000,000,000, as compared with Government income of $4,000,000,000.

Taber, like many who have studied the situation, expressed the additional opinion that much more depended upon the extent of expenditures for relief. Chairman Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, has hinted that a billion-dollar figure might be forthcoming.

Walker Slated to Quit.

By the Associated Press.

Frank C. Walker was reported by friends last night to have reached an all but final decision to resign as director of the National Emergency Council.

Two reasons were advanced. Close friends said that he desired to give his attention for a time to personal business, particularly to a chain of theaters operated by a relative who recently died.

From political sources, however, came renewal of talk that Walker, who at one time was treasurer of the Democratic national committee, might succeed Postmaster General Farley in that Cabinet post.

That would allow Farley to turn his undivided attention to his national committee chairmanship and the campaign to renominate and reelect President Roosevelt.

Walker himself declined to talk about his plans except to say, as he left a White House talk with Mr. Roosevelt this morning, that "I didn't hand in my resignation."

Convicts Use Rope In Prison Escape

By the United Press.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 10.—Three prisoners, two of them serving life sentences for murder, tonight escaped from the State prison of southern Michigan by climbing over the wall with the aid of a crude rope ladder.

Guard Harry Glair saw the prisoners as they dropped over the wall and fired two shots at them. They fled through a nearby field.

Authorities at the prison said the men used a ladder made from binder twine. State police immediately blockaded all roads leading from Jackson.

Two of the men, Sam Lieb and Leslie Maurer, were serving life sentences for murder. They were sentenced in January, 1933, for participation in a shooting in which a bystander, William Marshall, was killed and four others wounded.

The third escaped convict, Nelson Sylvester, was sentenced from Oakland County, Mich., for armed robbery.

"Mr. Littauer's magnificent gift will promote the development of these plans and their co-ordination through the new school of public administration."

In making the gift, the aged manufacturer, a Harvard graduate of the class of 1878, said he was "carrying out a conception which has long been in my mind, but I am especially glad to be able to make the proposal at this particular time in recognition of Harvard's coming 300th anniversary."

Formerly in Congress.

Dr. Conant, reporting that President Dodds had accepted the chairmanship of the commission to study education and training in public administration, said "no one could be better qualified than" the Princeton president.

Littauer retired voluntarily from Congress after serving five consecutive terms beginning in 1896.

With Dr. Dodds on the commission will be Leonard D. White, of Washington, United States Civil Service Commissioner; William B. Munro, of Pasadena, Calif., professor of history and government at the California Institute of Technology; Dean Wallace B. Donham, of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, and two members of the Harvard faculty, Harold H. Burbank, professor of political economy, and Morris B. Philippine Clipper Reaches Honolulu

Ends 1st Hop of 2nd Westbound Pacific Flight.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, Dec. 10.—The Philippine Clipper seaplane alighted at Pearl Harbor today 20 hours 14 minutes out of Alameda, Calif., with the second westbound load of transpacific air mail.

Capt. J. H. Tilton, piloting the flying boat on the 8,000-mile route to Manila, said the schedule will be approximately the same as that of the China Clipper, a sister ship, which made the inaugural flight. The Philippine Clipper alighted at 9:01 a. m. (2:31 p. m., Eastern standard time).

Headwinds were encountered on much of the 2,400-mile trip from Alameda, Capt. Tilton said.

The Philippine Clipper, with its crew of 11 and L. Harmantas, meteorologist, will leave tomorow for a flight to Midway Islands, the second stop. It is scheduled to reach Manila December 16.

Mussolini Lets Peace Bid Wait; Pleases Rome

Il Duce Fails to View New Plan; Fascists See Gains, Also Objections.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Dec. 10.—Benito Mussolini locked his desk and went home tonight without seeing the official Franco-British plan for peace in Africa, but unofficial Fascists were cheered by the offer.

Even if the plan is rejected, they said, it showed that the powers, after applying sanctions, are giving far more than they proposed to do at first. Objections were raised to the plan in these circles.

Fascists expect the armies in Ethiopia to strengthen Il Duce's hand by further advances and a smashing victory.

Mussolini's stand on the peace plan remained a mystery. He may have received all details through his ambassadors to Paris and London, but he did not look at the official proposal. All Italian officials refused comment.

The Premier never has told his people what territory in Ethiopia he wanted, but unofficial sources said he wants a broad band connecting Eritrea and Somaliland and the disarmament of the remainder of Haile Selassie's kingdom.

Unofficial reports were that the Franco-British plan had encountered these three objections.

1. The return to Ethiopia of the Holy City of Aksum, which Italy has annexed in Tigre Province.
2. The failure to connect Eritrea and Somaliland.
3. The fact that granting a free port to Ethiopia would loosen Italy's hold on the country and enable Addis Ababa to import unlimited arms.

Favorable points, as seen in unofficial circles, included:

1. Italy would get much territory, in the form of a nutcracker, which might "close" some day.
2. Police and economic control of the lake region south of Addis Ababa would suffice commercially and might later be transformed into a firmer hold.
3. Italy would redeem her place in the three-power front (with Britain and France) and would have proved her ability to act with 52 nations against her.

In informed circles it was said Il Duce is awaiting a "best offer" from London and Paris. Meanwhile, he is pressing the fighting in Africa and the strenuous drive at home to defeat the purpose of the League sanctions.

Selassie Studies Plan.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Emperor Haile Selassie, at his Dessye headquarters, tonight studied what were believed to be authentic terms of the Franco-British plan for peace between Ethiopia and Italy.

The proposals were transmitted from Addis Ababa by government officials. It was understood they reached here through diplomatic channels.

On the basis of the version submitted to the King of Kings, officials held little hope of Ethiopian acceptance, regardless of whether Italy agrees.

Officials added, however, that the Emperor might be willing to recede somewhat beyond his previous unyielding stand if assured of solid backing from Europe in case his conciliation involved him in a revolt of tribesmen.

Tentative Jury Seated In Mass Murder Trial

Port Orchard, Wash., Dec. 10 (AP). A jury of eight men and four women was tentatively seated today to try Leo Hall and Mrs. Peggy Peterson Paulos for the Erlands Point mass murder.

Prosecutor R. Warren Miller asserted he possessed a letter written by Hall to Mrs. Carrie E. Stickles, of Memphis, Tenn., in which Hall asked her for money to flee the State after the slaying of four men and two women in the Frank Flieder home on the night of March 28, 1934. The woman now is en route to Port Orchard, Miller said, to testify for the State.

Philippine Police Slay Four Bandits in Battle

Manila, Dec. 10 (AP).—Four bandits were reported killed today in fighting with constabulary in the mountains of Tayabas Province near San Miguel.

Three hundred constabulary assigned to wipe out two outlaw bands were previously reported killing seven bandits. The hunted gangs were blamed for at least eight recent killings.

of land linking it to Ethiopia proper.

The Ogaden and Danakil country in the southeast to be transferred to Italy.

A zone of colonization under an Italian chartered company to be established in the territory 8 degrees north latitude to 36 degrees east longitude.

A treaty of administrative and financial assistance to be drawn up between Ethiopia and the League of Nations.

Revision of the program was made after attacks upon it in the British House of Commons and reports of disapproval by British cabinet members.

Sir Robert Vansittart, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, who collaborated with Premier Laval and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, declared:

"We are absolutely in accord, as we were Sunday night. The only things disturbing the situation are wild rumors concerning the plan. The vast majority of them are absurd."

He made the statement after a 40-minute talk with Laval, in which the British Ambassador, Sir George Russell Clerk, also joined.

Sent to Foes, Geneva.

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—An Anglo-French peace plan was en route to Rome, Addis Ababa and Geneva tonight after changes in it were made in Paris upon the demand of the British cabinet.

Running into a storm of parliamentary criticism today, the cabinet withdrew its approval of the original scheme, and then modified it.

The alterations apparently ended a disagreement within the cabinet, but left an atmosphere of uneasiness and suspicion in Parliament regarding the extent of the concessions to Italy.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs, bore the brunt of exceptionally strong criticism in House of Commons debate late tonight.

Not Official Views.

Both leaders emphasized that the proposals did not necessarily represent the views of the British and French governments, but were suggested as ways the warring nations might get together.

"We are not going to enforce this basis of settlement on the League, Italy or Ethiopia if they do not want it," Baldwin declared.

"If nothing results, we must try again by and by. We shall have to consider again the whole question of how far sanctions may go. It really is not a simple thing to stop oil from going through Italy. It is extraordinarily complicated, and if you are going to do it you must be sure your prohibition is effective."

Eden, tonight for the first time, disclosed officially its general outline.

His speech, at the same time, tended to dispel rumors he would resign because of opposition to the original plan, drafted over the week-end in Paris by Laval and Sir Samuel Hoare, Britain's foreign secretary.

"Betrayal" Charged.

Opposition to this program, as described by newspaper accounts, extended in Parliament today even to the ranks of conservatives on the ground that it "betrayed" the League and allowed Premier Mussolini to fix his own terms.

As the peace plan now stands, as described by Eden, it provides:

1. Exchange of Italo-Ethiopian territory, "conveying definite advantages to both sides."
2. "League assistance to Ethiopia for the purposes of social, economic and administrative developments."
3. "Special facilities for Italian settlers and Italian companies in connection with economic development."

Eden refused to disclose details, declaring:

"The proposals which had been agreed to did not necessarily represent the views of the French government or of the British government, but they represented, in the view of those who met in Paris, proposals which might enable the parties to get together. We are not seeking to impose terms on anyone."

Eden begged the house not to bind him at forthcoming Geneva meetings on sanctions "to any particular forms of procedure."

"I ask for latitude and for confidence of the house in the discharge of my duties," he said, declaring that the government's policy remains based "on its membership in the League of Nations."

Baldwin in Tight Spot.

The sharp disapproval which greeted the first plan today placed the new government of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin in a tight and embarrassing corner.

Extensive ramifications were linked with the situation in the corridors of Commons. Members, it was understood, said the gravity of affairs in Egypt and Kenya influenced the government's original action on the peace plan, which was later rescinded.

After the cabinet, in emergency session, rescinded its approval Maurice Peterson, Ethiopian expert of the foreign office, was sent to Paris to reopen negotiations. The government called in high commissioners of the dominions for a conference.

A vehement attack was made upon the government by the opposition in Commons and debate produced both sarcastic references to Laval and a Laborite charge that the League and the British people had been betrayed by the proposals.

The French foreign office issued a statement calling false reports that the peace plan makes so many concessions to Italy that it violates Ethiopia's sovereignty and the Covenant of the League of Nations.

Official French sources have expressed the view that Mussolini is inclined to discuss a peace agreement based on the Franco-British plan and also that Haile Selassie would agree to trade part of his empire for a seaport, provided he were assured of continued control over the remainder of Ethiopia.

Arabian Leader Urges Drive Against Britain

Jaffa, Palestine, Dec. 10 (Palcor Agency).—Meeting on the eighteenth anniversary of the capture of Jerusalem by Gen. Allenby, Arab political leaders last night adopted a resolution firmly declaring that an organized Arab offensive must be directed against England.

They asserted Great Britain was responsible for the present disturbed political situation in Palestine. The meeting was addressed by extremist Arab leaders.

Lesser Powers In League Rebel On Peace Offer

Franco-British Idea Is Called Premium for Aggression.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Dec. 10.—The League of Nations was threatened tonight with a crisis over the opposition of smaller powers to the reported African peace plan drafted by Great Britain and France.

If newspaper reports of the peace plan are correct, some delegates said, a serious situation would develop, with resignations of certain nations possible. The situation was described as a virtual rebellion.

Representatives of smaller powers said that if the reported peace plan was put through it would result in the League's having given Italy a "premium for aggression."

(Newspaper accounts said that under the peace plan Italy would be given considerable areas of Ethiopia and Ethiopia a port by Italy. Opposition to the program in official circles in London today forced the British cabinet to withdraw its approval of the plan and a resumption of negotiations with Paris.)

Losses Cited.

Referring to financial losses incurred by nations enforcing sanctions against Italy, one delegate asked:

"Why should we lose money to facilitate a big power deal?"

Another delegate said his country approved sanctions to prevent Italian aggression against Ethiopia and to establish a precedent for future collective security against war.

The rebellion of smaller powers seemed to be taking form in the following concrete program:

That the League committee of 18 on sanctions should not postpone fixing a date for the addition of oil to articles banned to Italy.

An armistice is a necessary accompaniment to any Italo-Ethiopian peace negotiations.

The League Council should be given the opportunity to weigh Franco-British peace proposals.

Announcement Made.

The League announced Premier Laval of France, leader in drafting the peace plan, would attend Thursday's session of the committee of 18. Officials anticipate the committee will insist that it be enlightened upon the exact status of peace efforts.

The agenda of the committee includes the discussion of an oil embargo against Italy. Before the smaller power revolt appeared on the surface, officials had indicated this discussion might be postponed because the oil embargo would cripple peace attempts.

Dr. Augusto Vasconcellos, of Portugal, the committee's chairman, said, however, he had not been asked to postpone the date for the session.

Tampa Boycott By A.F.L. Urged In Labor Protest

Tampa for questioning in connection with alleged communistic activities.

The night they were released a gang of masked men kidnaped them. They flogged and otherwise tortured them and left them half-naked in a woods. Shoemaker, a man weighing 220 pounds, died Monday night from the injuries inflicted on him by the gang.

Baron said last night that the reason the men were flogged was not that they were communists, but because they opposed a political ring in Tampa and were organizing the unemployed. The kidnapers, he charged, were Tampa policemen and detectives.

An Associated Press dispatch last night said that, as a result of Shoemaker's death, a reward of $2,500 has been offered, a grand jury session has been called and Gov. Dave Sholtz has asked Tampa authorities for a complete report on the "dastardly crime."

Young Olvany Tips Reporter; Shoots Himself

Politicians Son Is Found With Two Bullets in Head After Party.

By the Associated Press.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Dec. 10.—George Olvany, jr., young son of a former Tammany Hall political chieftain, tipped a reporter on a news story today, then dramatically made the tip good. He apparently shot himself through the head. Tonight he was dying.

The tip was contained in a note handed Bruce Clark, a newspaperman friend, early today, with instructions to open at 2 a. m.

At Olvany's bedside in General Hospital tonight where his parents, former Judge George W. Olvany, sr., and Mrs. Olvany. They had flown 250 miles from New York City.

Found Unconscious.

Young Olvany was found lying unconscious on the grounds of a deserted hotel at 3 a. m. today. Two bullets had entered his head, one in the temple, one through the nose.

Lying beside him was his .45-caliber automatic pistol.

A few hours earlier the young man had given a farewell party for a small group of friends. Among these was Clark, who was told by Olvany to "watch for a news story." Clark thought the youth was joking. Later Olvany handed Clark a note with directions to open the message at 2 a. m.

Entering into the spirit of what he still believed to be a jest, Clark delayed opening the note until that hour.

"Don't Spare the Horses"

Written on stationery of a Syracuse newspaper, it read:

"Dear Bruce: The story I told you about broke this morning—enclosing taxi fare so you won't be in the hole if it isn't of interest.

"Get a taxi to take you to the bench opposite the Ampersand boat house. The story should be near my car.

"Couldn't give you the details beforehand, as I was afraid you might get hurt—and I didn't want any innocent parties to get the blame.

"Drop over to my room later.

"Tally-ho,

Italians Fleeing In Makale Area, Defenders Say

Addis Ababa Reports Two Victories, Retreat by Blackshirts.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 10.—The Ethiopian government asserted today that Italians are retreating from their main front lines in the Makale region following successes by the African defenders.

Two victories were reported won by the armies of Ras Seyoum, former governor of Tigre Province, in the northern area last week.

An official communique said Seyoum's warriors scattered Italian advance encampments at Kalhabile December 2 and at Menagar the next day. Nine Italians were left dead on the battlefields, the communique continued, and a number of rifles were captured.

"Fifty soldiers from the personal bodyguard of the traitor Haile Selassie Gugsa (son-in-law of the Emperor) joined the Ethiopia side December 8," the government added.

"The Italians seized all cattle in a big round-up north of Makale December 7, without indemnifying the population."

Rome, Dec. 10 (AP).—Commanders of Italy's huge northern and southern armies in Ethiopia were reported today to anticipate much stiffer resistance soon from the defending warriors of Emperor Haile Selassie.

War correspondents said scouts on the southern front believed 50,000 Ethiopians are concentrating north of Dolo, which is at the west end of the frontiers between Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

Large enemy bodies also are believed massing to attempt to head off any Fascist advance from the main lines at Makale.

Bayonet fighting by the northern army was reported in an official communique today, which said:

"On the Eritrean front, our detachments encountered a strong group of Ethiopian forces near the Takkaze River in the region south of Addi Encato.

"The adversary was attacked with bayonets and put to flight, leaving on the ground 15 dead. On our side, 2 Eritrean noncommissioned officers and 5 Askari were killed."

British Admit Sabotage On Warship, Submarine

London, Dec. 10 (AP).—The British admiralty today admitted the battleship Royal Oak and the submarine Oberon had been sabotaged, but added only that "inquiries into these cases are proceeding."

Home Shortage Here Charged By Committee

Central Union Body Says Condition Will Spread Throughout U. S.

A housing shortage in Washington, soon to spread throughout the country, was charged last night by the rent and low-cost housing committee of the Central Labor Union, meeting in Typographical Temple.

Delegates of 53 labor and fraternal groups, numbering 150 persons, opened a drive for new housing, control of rents and regulation of relationships between landlords and tenants to assure sanitary living conditions.

Creation of three new local agencies was urged upon Congress:

1. A housing authority for the District of Columbia, to build 25,000 dwelling units in the next ten years, in addition to regular replacements, the new units to rent at not more than $6 a month per room, the rent covering only maintenance and cost of city services and the whole to be administered by civil service managers co-operating with the tenants.

Rent Commission Urged.

2. A rent commission to determine fair rentals, after public hearings, with rents to be not higher than they were on January 1, 1934.

3. A housing commission to supply information and secure sanitary regulations and to set up an impartial tribunal to settle disputes between landlords and tenants on those regulations.

"The policies you work out here will be of national importance—labor groups all over the country are watching you," Miss Catherine Bauer, secretary of the Labor Housing Conference, told the meeting.

Ring Speaker.

James Ring, administrative assistant to the Alley Dwelling Authority, recommended a housing law with these objectives:

"Promulgation of a housing code to establish minimum standards for dwellings of all types; establishment of an office to regulate relations between landlords and tenants; maintenance of complete housing records, publication of housing information, and an educational service to inform the public as to its rights and responsibilities in connection with housing."

W. W. Keeler, of Machinists Lodge, No. 174, presided, and another speaker was the committee's secretary, Henry Rhine, of NRA Lodge, No. 91, A. F. G. E. The resolutions were offered by a committee headed by Ben Allen, of AAA Lodge, No. 170, A. F. G. E.

Manager of Office Seriously Wounded

Charles V. Etzler Found Shot at Home.

Charles V. Etzler, 42, an office manager for the National Metropolitan Bank, was found with a bullet wound in the right temple yesterday in the bathroom of his home at 1423 Minnesota avenue southeast.

Etzler's body, clad in pajamas, was found on the bathroom floor by Mabel Oden, a maid, who heard a gunshot.

According to the police, Etzler had returned from the bank about 2 p. m. He wrote a note to his wife bidding her goodby and expressing his love for her. Providence Hospital physicians held little hope for his recovery.

U. S. Asks Embassy For Spy Evidence

By the Associated Press.

The State Department yesterday asked the American Embassy at Moscow for information respecting the reported conviction and sentence to death there of a Soviet citizen employed in the Moscow offices of the International News Service.

The step was taken after International News Service representatives in Washington had laid before the department a report from its Moscow correspondent asserting that the employe, M. Mikhailov, had been convicted by a military tribunal of espionage and sentenced to be executed within 72 hours.

Since he is a Soviet citizen the American Government can not, under international law, make any representations in his behalf. Mikhailov formerly was employed by the Associated Press in its Moscow bureau.

Louis M. Schaefer Dies at 51 After 31 Years at the Willard

Transportation Manager Numbered Presidents Among Friends.

Good-natured Louis M. (Louie) Schaefer, 51, Willard Hotel transportation manager and friend of many celebrities, has gone on his last trip.

He died of heart disease early yesterday at his home, 1316 Farragut street northwest.

"Louie" made friends by the hundreds during his 31 years at the Willard. It was nothing for him to arrange air or rail transportation in the course of a day for half a dozen nationally known figures, ranging from the late Will Rogers to Primo Carnera. His friends included presidents and royal visitors.

Among "Louie's" acquaintances were President Roosevelt and the late President Calvin Coolidge, who lived at the Willard while he was Vice President.

Years ago, Admiral Togo, the Japanese naval hero, bestowed a medal on "Louie" for special courtesies he was accorded while a guest at the hotel.

Friends often marveled at "Louie's" faculty for remembering the names of infrequent and obscure guests.

Although he worked Monday and was his customary smiling self, "Louie" failed to respond to treatment after he was stricken in bed early yesterday.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Rose Schaefer, his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Fred A. J. Geier, wife of Dr. Geier; a brother, William and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Bogus, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. from the shrine of the Sacred Heart with the Rev. John Spence officiating. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Flock of Hyde Parks Mixes Ickes, Maybe

In a jocular mood, Secretary Ickes yesterday took cognizance of and denied charges that he had granted PWA money to a railroad touching the city of Hyde Park, Long Island, because he confused it with Hyde Park, N. Y., President Roosevelt's summer home.

"You can say instead that I confused it with Hyde Park, Ill., where I used to live," said Secretary Ickes.

On second thought, he added, "But if you use that, make it very clear that I'm joking."

Widow Here Wins $500,000 Judgment

Court Awards Her Share of Georgia Trust Fund.

More than $500,000 was won yesterday by Mrs. Elizabeth W. Comer, 3133 Connecticut avenue, through a ruling by the Georgia Supreme Court.

The jurists held she was entitled to a one-fifth interest in a trust fund set up by her father-in-law, Hugh M. Comer, sr., president of a Georgia railroad, before his death in 1900.

Mrs. Comer, the widow of Hugh M. Comer, jr., contested a suit by other heirs to prevent her from obtaining the interest of her husband. The younger Comer willed his share to his wife.

Totaling $250,000 when established, the fund has increased to $3,000,000.

Last Rites Today For A. A. Goldsmith

Former Horse-Car Driver Died Here Monday.

Mr. Goldsmith died Monday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William E. Greaves, 440 Newton place northwest, where the services will be held.

After leaving the traction company, Mr. Goldsmith entered the hauling and express business, from which he retired 13 years ago. He was a member of the Potomac Valley Forge Council, No. 3, Junior Order of United American Mechanics.

He is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Nellie M. Tate, and a son, Willard Leroy Goldsmith, all of Washington, and seven grandchildren.

President Approves Railroad Overpass

$220,804 Advanced to Erase Grade Crossings.

Presidential approval of a project calling for construction of an overpass across the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks at Michigan avenue northeast was announced yesterday by the Department of Agriculture.

The overpass will run from Seventh to Tenth streets and eliminate the present grade crossing immediately east of Catholic University. The sum of $220,804 is to be advanced out of Federal funds for the work. Cost of acquiring the necessary land has been borne by the District along with certain other costs.

Improvement of Wisconsin avenue northwest between Massachusetts avenue and River road was approved by the District Commissioners. The roadway is to have an asphalt surface laid over the present concrete pavement. It is one of several road improvement projects planned with WPA funds by the Bureau of Public Roads.

Wallace Seeks to Bar Grain Market Broker

The E. F. Carlston Co., Minneapolis grain firm, was called on by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday to show cause why it should not be barred from trading on all contract markets. The Government alleges representatives of the Department of Agriculture have been denied access to records of the company dealing with grain futures. A hearing was set for December 16, at Minneapolis.

This is the fifth case in which the Government has asked firms or individuals be barred from trading. Other cases were against Adrian Ettinger and Ewing W. Brand, of Cleveland; Arthur W. Cutten, Thomas M. Howell and Simon Wexler, of Chicago.

Doctor Upholds Birth Control's Vital Necessity

'Inconsisteney' of Present Laws Cited at Luncheon of Advocates.

Branding as absurd present prohibitive statutes on birth control, Dr. Prentiss Willson, Washington physician, yesterday made a plea for legal dissemination of information on the use of contraceptives as a "legitimate, necessary and vital part of preventive medicine."

The physician, secretary of the National Committee on Federal and State Birth Control Legislation, was speaker at the first of a series of weekly luncheons conducted by the National Committee on Federal Legislation for Birth Control.

Before 50 men and women, including several social welfare workers and committee members who met in the Women's City Club, he said the time had come to give to the doctors of medicine the authority to "evaluate the necessity" for contraceptives, and "to decide on the method" to be used by his patient. He said the physician is the "only person skilled enough to make these judgments."

Sees Absurdity in Law.

"The law prohibits dissemination of birth control information, but permits an abortion if necessary to save a woman's life," declared the physician, "I say that is absurd."

In reply to Cardinal Hayes, who attacked the birth-control advocates in a sermon in St. Patrick's Church, New York, Sunday morning came a statement by Guy Irving Burch, legislative secretary of the national committee.

Burch said he was astonished at Cardinal Hayes' remarks because "books bearing his own imprimatur (Cardinal Hayes') are now being sent freely through the mails to anyone who orders them."

A. M. A. Changes Attitude.

Dr. Willson related the history of the birth-control fight in the American Medical Association. "A few years ago the very convention that listened to a physician declare that contraception is one of the four major problems of women voted down a motion to study the question."

However, at the association's last convention a committee to make the study was appointed as the result of pressure from State societies and other professional groups, Dr. Willson said.

Mrs. Ruth Hopper was hostess at the noon gathering and introduced Dr. Willson. Next Tuesday the Rev. Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, will be the luncheon speaker.

Mrs. Louise Taylor's Funeral to Be Today

Mrs. Louise Taylor, 74, will be buried today, the cortege starting from the Chambers funeral home at 2 p. m. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Taylor died at her home in the Argonne Apartments last Monday. A son, Sylvan P. Taylor, of Miami, Fla., survives. She was the mother of Lady George Cholmondeley, who died recently in England, and the widow of Charles H. Taylor, builder, who died here several years ago.

Wardens of U. S. Jails Hold Keys for Santa

Santa Claus will have to seek permission of wardens before visiting Federal penitentiaries this year.

Sanford Bates, director of the Prison Bureau, said yesterday that "not more than two packages per prisoner" would be allowed to enter Federal penal institutions, and only then if the wardens approved.

Alcatraz, the island prison for "public enemies," and Leavenworth annex, prison for narcotic addicts, were scratched entirely from the Christmas list. No packages are allowed at Alcatraz because of the desperate character of the inmates, or at the annex because of the danger of smuggling narcotics to the prisoners.

Retired From Business in 1914; Was Director on Bank Board.

Born at Manassas, Va., Mr. French came to Washington half a century ago to start the real estate business that bore his name. He was active in the business until 1914, when he retired. Besides his many business interests he was an active member of the New Jerusalem Lodge of Masons.

He is survived by his widow, Mary Price French, and three sons, Raymond F., of Tampa, Fla.; J. Lewis, of Baltimore, and Howell P., of this city, who is employed at the Federal Housing Administration.

Anti-Noise Drive Successful in N. Y.

City Officials Visiting Here Tell of Improvement.

An anti-noise campaign really reduces noise. That is what two New York City officials yesterday told District officials.

The New Yorkers were Col. Harold Fowler, first deputy commissioner of police, and Lester Stone, assistant to Mayor Fiorella H. La Guardia. They came to Washington in response to invitations from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Improvement in New York has been brought about by appealing to the courtesy and good sportsmanship of persons rather than by resort to police regulations, it was said.

Bar's Pageant Nearly Ready, Lawyers Drill

50 Lawyers Stage 20th Rehearsal of Making of the Constitution.

Holding the twentieth of a series of rehearsals that started last September, 50 members of the District Bar Association last night swung into the last week of preparation for their "Making of the Constitution" pageant, to be held at Constitution Hall next Wednesday night.

The rehearsal was held at George Washington University Law School, where there will be another drill Friday night, followed by two rehearsals Monday and Tuesday on the Constitution Hall stage.

Announcing that 260 invitations, embracing more than 500 persons, had been issued for the pageant, H. Winship Wheatley, bar association president, emphasized last night that:

"There is nothing political about this affair. I happened to see a version of the pageant when it was first staged by the Los Angeles Bar Association last summer, and we thought it would be a good idea to hold it here."

Doubt Shrouds Steps in Behalf Of Hauptmann

Wife Visits Doomed Man; Governor Says He Alone Can't Stop Execution.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 10.—The next move Bruno Richard Hauptmann's attorneys will make to save him from the electric chair for the Lindbergh baby kidnaping-murder remained a matter of doubt today and Hauptmann himself, his wife said, was uncertain what it would be.

Mrs. Hauptmann and C. Lloyd Fisher, one of Hauptmann's lawyers, visited the condemned man in the death house of State Prison. They said they found him cheerful and confident in spite of the shock caused by the refusal of the United States Supreme Court to review his Flemington trial.

"He's just the same as ever," Mrs. Hauptmann said. "He hasn't lost courage. Most of our talk was about the baby and he asked for pictures of him."

Hoffman Tells Position.

Fisher and Egbert Rosecrans may ask for a new trial on the basis of what they call newly discovered evidence, or they may appeal directly to the Court of Pardons for clemency. This court, composed of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, an ex-officio member; Chancellor Luther A. Campbell, highest judicial officer in the State, and six lay judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, may act on the case, however, of its own volition.

Gov. Hoffman said today any representations that he had pledged himself to save Hauptmann from the electric chair were "absolutely untrue."

"I have never expressed to any one," the Governor said, "an opinion as to Hauptmann's guilt or innocence."

Asked whether he had been advised by a defense attorney at a conference yesterday that he had power to commute Hauptmann's death sentence to life imprisonment regardless of the vote of other members of the court of pardons, the Governor said vehemently:

"I'll deny that."

Only Board Can Save.

"Hauptmann couldn't get clemency," the Governor said, "unless a majority of the court, including myself, voted for it. If I alone voted for clemency, the death sentence would not be disturbed and Hauptmann would be executed."

Gov. Hoffman went to Detroit by plane late today to make a safety speech. He will return to Trenton tomorrow.

It is his interest in the case, as well as the expressed conviction of Ellis H. Parker, Burlington County detective chief, that Hauptmann is innocent, which have heartened the defense.

Parker, it was disclosed today by Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the State prison, has a pass to the death house. It was issued by Common Pleas Judge Frank A. Hendrickson, of Burlington County, to permit Parker to see John Jacob Ciemiengo, 16, convicted three weeks ago of a holdup murder.

Col. Kimberling said he would instruct the guards, however, not to let Parker talk to Hauptmann.

Ellsworth Rescuers Charter New Plane

Hawks Says Ship Leaves Kansas City Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 10.—A monoplane to be used in the search for the missing Lincoln Ellsworth air party in the Antarctic will take off southward from Kansas City Thursday morning, Capt. Frank Hawks, who is aiding in arranging the flight, said tonight.

Capt. Hawks said the Northrop Gamma plane, chartered from the Texas company, would be piloted by Dick Merrill, Eastern Airlines pilot on the New York-Miami run. With Merrill will go Mechanic William Klenke, who was with Russell Thaw when the latter's plane crashed yesterday at Atlanta, Ga., en route to the Antarctic.

The replacement plane will fly via Brownsville, Tex., Hawks said. Skis and other special equipment are being transferred from the Thaw plane for installation in the new ship at the Kansas City Municipal Airport.

Sea Searched for Army Fliers Missing in Canal Zone Crash

2 of 5 in Plane Rescued After Braving Shark-infested Waters.

By the Associated Press.

Cristobal, Canal Zone, Dec. 10.—Three Navy airplanes and several boats searched the Atlantic Ocean and beaches near here tonight for trace of three Americans missing since their Army bombing plane dived into the water last night.

Two other occupants of the plane were recovering from shock and exposure after swimming in shark-infested waters to an island off the coast, from which they were rescued.

The three missing men are Private William Cooper, son of Zacha Cooper, of Charlotte, N. C.; Private Joseph Bergeron, son of Mrs. Julia Bergeron, Woonsocket, R. I., and Staff Sergt. Golan Blunden, a native of Catalina, Newfoundland, who had been attached to France Field, in the Canal Zone, for ten years.

Lieut. E. C. Madson, of the United States Navy, piloting a patrol plane, picked up Lieut. John A. Samford and Private Roland F. Dufor on Orange Key Island.

The two men signaled to the pilot this morning by waving a life vest, after they had spent a night on the beach watching the flares of rescue planes whose occupants could not see them in the darkness.

Lieut. Madson made a difficult landing on the rough sea and took Lieut. Samford and Private Dufor back to their quarters, where they were said to be in a weakened condition.

Samford told the commanding officer that the motor of their bomber failed while they were making a routine night flight to Porto Bello. He tried to make a forced landing, he said, but the plane nose-dived into the ocean and was partly submerged.

The officer said he and Dufor hung onto a wheel of the plane and, using a life belt, made a rough raft to which they clung while propelling themselves to the island's shore. They did not see the other three men, he said.

U. S. Considers Plan to Build 2 Airports Here

as a solution to the airport site dilemma left by the last session of Congress, pointed out also that President Roosevelt in his Atlanta address had cited airport construction as a worthwhile project for WPA expenditures. He cited also Secretary of War Dern's recent report urging more adequate aviation facilities.

Military Use Possible.

Construction of the two airports with Federal funds would, of course, make them available for use in time of national emergencies by the War and Navy Departments.

The Commerce Department has not decided just what agency would take the responsibility of constructing the airports, Johnson said. The National Capital Parks Office is a possibility, he said. In any case, the airports would be publicly owned.

Nothing further will be done, however, until the idea is approved by the Senate and House District Committees. Then the Commerce Department will carry on further its efforts to find a governmental agency to sponsor the construction.

The dual project would cost approximately $5,000,000 on the basis of estimates previously made to congressional committees. Washington Airport would cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000 initially, according to prices quoted, and at least another $500,000 to develop.

Division Proposed.

The cost of developing Gravelly Point would cost another $2,500,000 over a three-year period. Bills introduced in Congress have proposed division of the cost between the Federal and District governments, but the latter has insisted it hasn't the money and that the airport would actually be a national rather than a municipal asset.

Opposition to the Commerce Department proposal so far as it involves Washington Airport doubtless will come from Arlington County and Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

Their reason for opposing any plan to convert Washington Airport into a Government-owned airport or park is that it would take away valuable taxable property. The Washington Airport now pays $8,500 a year.

Representative Randolph, who has earned the title of "the flying Congressman," tried to get in touch with other members of the airport subcommittee after receiving Johnson's letter, but none was in the city. He expressed the belief, however, that all would approve.

ceeded by Jose A. Barney, secretary of state. Under the law, Barnet must call a joint meeting of the council of state and the cabinet within 48 hours and that meeting will elect a provisional president.

The provisional president would serve until a constitutional president was elected and inaugurated.

Several hours before the Mendieta broadcast was cancelled, reliable sources reported that 14 men, some of them armed with machine guns, had wrecked the equipment of radio station CMQ.

CMQ did not figure in the projected Mendieta broadcast, but last night the station reported it had been ordered by officials of the communications department to cut off a program sponsored by the Menocalistas.

Reports of an attack on the station from which Mendieta was to have broadcast were stated to be erroneous. The president's reported decision to resign apparently caused him to cancel the speech.

He was understood to have made the decision in view of the criticism he has received during the past few days from the Menocalistas and other parties.

(The National Broadcasting Co. in New York said the speech was cancelled "owing to an intense political situation which developed late today following a machine gun attack on a radio station while a political speech was being delivered.")

Liggett Widow Faints on Way To See Suspect

Declares She Will Know Face of Gunman Who Killed Publisher.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Dec. 10.—Authorities tonight awaited a distraught widow's aiding word in their puzzling task of determining the slayer of Walter Liggett, crusading publisher, victim of an alley ambush by a gunman.

But the widow—still suffering from the shock of seeing her husband killed before her eyes—collapsed when they attempted to take her to headquarters to view a suspect. It was then announced she would be confined to her home for the night.

Authorities said their next move would depend on whether she would swear a complaint for their prisoner without charge, Isadore Blumenfeld.

City Jail Captain Al Marken said she told him that Blumenfeld, known also as "Kid Cann," was the man who shot her husband to death Monday night.

"I'll remember that face (the slayer's) as long as I live," they quoted her as saying.

Blumenfeld, a recent target of Liggett's editorial attacks, is a liquor salesman. He gave a "barber shop" alibi when police questioned him and the St. Paul Dispatch quoted Dave T. Garfinkle, a Minneapolis barber, as saying he would testify the prisoner was in his shop at the time the publisher was murdered.

The sensational slaying, second of a weekly's publisher here within 15 months, aroused a variety of theories, among them one of "hired killers."

Gov. Floyd B. Olson, a principal object for the slain publisher's bitter pen in recent months, termed the slaying an "outrage" and offered the State's crime investigators to aid the city and county authorities.

The latitude of Liggett's activity was revealed also in a statement from former Gov. William Langer, of North Dakota, that the slaying victim, former editor and political leader in that State, was to have been a "star defense witness" in Langer's current conspiracy trial at Bismarck.

County Attorney Ed M. Goff announced he would resist efforts to free Blumenfeld and would convene the grand jury Thursday or Friday to investigate the case.

"I don't care whether Mrs. Liggett swears out a conspiracy complaint or not," Goff said, "I'm going to have the jury investigate. I'm going to do everything possible to solve this."

Goff inaugurated the inquiry into the unsolved slaying of Howard Guilford, publisher of a paper similar to Liggett's.

Charles Bank, attorney for Blumenfeld, said he would wait until "later" before possibly seeking a writ of habeas corpus for his client.

Fewer Business Failures.

Hearst, Visiting Landon, Calls Him 'a Winner'

Could Rout New Deal in 1936, Publisher Says; Block Adds Praise.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Dec. 10.—William Randolph Hearst sized up Gov. Alf M. Landon today and hailed him as a man who could rout the Roosevelt forces in 1936.

"Landon can be nominated by the Republicans and elected," Hearst said. "He understands the issues."

Scarcely less outspoken in his praise of the Kansas budget-balancer was Paul Block, also the publisher of a group of newspapers, who also came here to visit Landon.

"If the Republican convention were held tomorrow," Block said, "Landon would receive the nomination easily."

Hearst stopped briefly en route to California. After lunch at the rambling old frame dwelling which serves as the Kansas executive mansion, Hearst, smiling broadly, exclaimed:

"I think he is marvelous. To say I am favorably impressed puts it very mildly."

Block, who said the only purpose of his trip here was to "become personally acquainted" with Landon, seconded Hearst in his post-luncheon comment.

"He's an even bigger man than I had previously thought."

Smiles formed the only response of either Hearst or Block to questions as to whether they had pledged the Kansas Governor their support.

But Block unequivocally predicted the defeat of the New Deal and Hearst said:

"If the Republicans and those opposed to the New Deal united on a man like Gov. Landon—a man who is a doer and not a promiser—the New Deal can be defeated."

Both Hearst and Block sought to contrast the record of Landon with that of President Roosevelt.

"In the minds of the public," said Hearst, "Mr. Roosevelt is a gay promiser of things. Landon, on the other hand, is one who does things."

And Block said:

"Mr. Roosevelt left the State of New York $300,000,000 further in debt when he left office than when he took over. Gov. Landon has demonstrated to the Nation he can do the opposite."

Also at the luncheon were George B. Longan, president of the Kansas City Star; Henry J. Haskell, editor of the Star; Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Arthur J. Carruth, jr., editor of the Topeka State Journal, and Frank Burns, of Seattle, Republican national committeeman for Washington.

Mendieta Cancels Plan For Radio Talk to U. S.

Six pages of information are required. The data must include when the candidate for marriage learned to walk and speak, his or her childhood habits, spiritual development and parentage, smoking, drinking and sexual habits, distribution of fat, hair and muscular development, criminal tendencies, if any, the health of all organs and the candidate's state of fecundity.

Green Rebukes Lewis for Bid To Lead Revolt

A. F. of L. Head Hints Belief Industrial Union Plan Has Dual Aim.

The controversy within the American Federation of Labor flared again yesterday, when William Green, A. F. of L. president, sent a sharply worded letter to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, in reply to the latter's invitation to Green to head the industrial union movement.

Lewis is head of the organization, representing about 1,000,000 workers, which is insisting that the federation policy be changed to allow promotion of industrial as well as craft union organizations.

Green indicated that he believed the Lewis organization to be a "dual" one, that is, a labor group attempting to compete with the federation.

Up to Convention.

The federation president said that policies of the organization are determined in its conventions. He said there were occasions when he was participating as a delegate that policies he advocated were rejected.

"I acquiesced in the decision," he said, "and in the spirit of good sportsmanship took it on the chin, reserving to myself the right to renew the fight, if the opportunity presented itself, for the acceptance of the principles and policies which I believed to be right, at the next convention.

"There can be no doubt of where I stand. I am governed by the laws of the American Federation of Labor. The obligation I assumed when I became a member of organized labor and the responsible position which I now hold require me to carry out the policies adopted at annual conventions of the American Federation of Labor. This I will do at any cost. When I can not do so I will resign."

Coal Firm Gets Permanent Ban On Guffey Tax

Injunction Relieves Carter Company of Accruals; U. S. to Appeal.

By the Associated Press.

The Carter Coal Co. of West Virginia, challenging constitutionality of the Guffey Coal control act, was granted a permanent injunction yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court relieving the firm from paying the penalty tax which had accrued to date.

The injunction was granted in Justice Adkins' formal decree which officially terminated the case in the District court.

The decree also granted a temporary injunction restraining the Government from collection of the 13½ per cent tax pending the outcome of a Supreme Court appeal.

Government attorneys immediately served notice they would appeal the permanent injunction, contending it was "illogical," as the Supreme Court may sustain the act and thus make the company liable for the penalty since the tax went into effect November 1.

In his oral opinion, delivered more than a week ago, Justice Adkins sustained all the act's provisions, except those providing for determination of hours and wages through collective bargaining.

Reed Collapses As He Finishes AAA Defense

The Hoosac Mills test of AAA processing taxes came to the court fresh from a Boston Federal court opinion that they were invalid. The lower court decision involved only the original AAA act, but Pepper broadened his case to include also the AAA amendments enacted last session ratifying processing taxes imposed by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

The Bankhead law case, taken up by the Supreme Court immediately following completion of arguments in the AAA case, rose from a suit brought by Lee Moor, a Texas cotton farmer, who brought action against the New Orleans & Texas Railroad for not moving his cotton because it did not carry Bankhead ginning tax exemptions.

The Government had entered the Bankhead case at the last minute as a "friend of the court," seeking to limit Supreme Court jurisdiction to purely ethical questions and asking the court to lay the constitutional issues aside.

Reed picked up the Government's gauntlet in the Bankhead suit yesterday after he had completed the strenuous job of replying to Pepper's processing tax arguments. In the latter task, he took the tack that the "general welfare" clause of the Constitution, never interpreted by the Supreme Court, provided ample authority for the imposition of the tax.

Bankhead Law Suit.

As the court passed on to hearings on the Bankhead law suit, three attorneys for Moor, the Texas cotton farmer, proceeded before the bar, headed by Thornton Hardie, of El Paso. Hardie claimed Government sanctions against shipment of 2,500 bales of Moor's cotton (his Government allotment was only 855 bales), constituted "duress."

Justices closely questioned Hardie as to why his client accepted a cotton allotment if he considered the act unconstitutional.

His soft, Southern drawl and colorful illustrations several times brought smiles to the faces of the staid court justices. They chuckled outright when he said he considered anything the Government did "important."

"When you catch one pig by the foot, the pig can't tell you, 'Let go of this pig and take that one over there,'" he told the court.

It was Hardie's contention that Moor accepted his cotton quota only under compulsion. He said it was "doubtful" Moor could collect any damages from the road, and as for recovery of Bankhead taxes from the Government, litigation would take two years "and by that time a farmer would be 'busted.'"

Railroad's Dilemma.

His arguments were supplemented by Henry E. Hackney, of Uniontown, Pa. Then Ben C. Dey, of New York, counsel for the New Orleans & Texas Railroad, explained the dilemma the road was in, between Moor's suit on the one hand and threatened Federal penalties on the other. Dey insisted there was no "prearrangement" of the suit between the railroad and Moor.

Reed followed Dey before the court. His argument that this was "clearly a non-adversary case" apparently took the court by surprise.

"There is nothing in the record to show opposition between plaintiff and defendant or an effort to try out this issue," said Reed.

"Do you attempt to raise that question here when the respondents have come here and said just the contrary?" asked Justice McReynolds. "What concern is it of yours? How can the Government come in and say, 'We don't think so.'"

Argument Shut Off.

Reed said there was no objection to the Government coming in. He said he did not understand the Government was limited in argument to equity questions involved, although Moor's counsel had objected to arguing anything other than constitutional issues.

Chief Justice Hughes said the question was whether Reed could argue that "this is a collusive suit."

"We never used the term 'collusion,'" said Reed. "We said 'non-adversary' suit." He added there "was nothing in the record" to show an "adversary" proceeding.

At one point, Justice Vandevanter interposed, "You wouldn't say it was 'non-adversary' solely because he didn't deny something that he knew was true," and at another point, Justice McReynolds put in that he "couldn't listen to that sort of an argument with patience."

When Reed assented to Hughes' inquiry whether he spoke solely from his deductions from the court record, the Chief Justice closed argument abruptly on the "non-adversary" question with:

"The court does not desire to hear you further on that point."

Reed Condition Better.

It was following a long argument on whether Reed might speak on "the adequacy of the record as it affects the constitutional question," that Reed suddenly collapsed.

The court had not ruled. Justice Butler had observed that he "thought that point was under consideration a moment ago" and the Chief Justice was pressing the Solicitor General on his basis for stating the record did not offer a field for a constitutional decision.

Justices stared their wonderment as Reed excused himself and dropped into a chair.

Called at the Reed apartment last night, Mrs. Reed said the solicitor was considerably improved, but would not know until this morning whether he is able to go on with the case.

In his earlier defense of the AAA act, Reed had denied Pepper's contention that the act was part of a "regimentation" and "control" scheme, insisting it was entirely "voluntary."

"Is there any reason why this country should be denied the same right to aid its agricultural citizens that other countries have?" he asked. "Certainly it must be done under the Constitution, but the Constitution must be interpreted in the light of the general welfare."

Preceding Reed before the bar, Pepper, immaculately dressed in morning clothes, insisted the same issues were involved in the AAA that caused the Supreme Court to invalidate the NRA.

"The Secretary of Agriculture has no more authority to regiment agriculture than the President had a right to regiment industry," he said.

Referring to favorable AAA polls of farmers, he said "you might just as well poll college students on whether or not allowances by fathers should be continued."

"General Welfare" Views.

Under the Government's interpretation of the "general welfare" clause Pepper said the Government could take over agriculture to help the farmer and take over industry to aid the banks.

"This is the 'general welfare clause' gone mad," he said.

"It is robbing Peter the processor to pay Paul the producer."

He urged, instead, the Hamiltonian view that the "general welfare" sought in the Constitution was "a welfare in the scope of the general powers."

The AAA he branded "a gigantic scheme for producing artificial scarcity in pursuit of a nebulous economic theory."

Copyright by A. P.

Inauguration of New Deal Governor Is Colorful; Farley and Other Notables Attend Ceremony; Thousands Parade in Honor of Executive.

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 10.—A. B. ("Happy") Chandler, 37-year-old veteran of some of Kentucky's bitterest political wars, became chief executive of the Bluegrass Commonwealth today with the New Deal's approval and the cheers of thousands of citizens.

After Chief Justice William Rogers Clay, Chandler repeated Kentucky's ancient oath of office, pledging fealty to the United States and Kentucky constitutions. Also he affirmed that he had not, while a Kentucky citizen, fought a duel, sent, accepted, carried a challenge, acted as a second or abetted any one else in doing so. These sections were placed in the official oath at a time when Kentucky statesmen appealed to pistols issues not satisfactorily decided at the polls.

Gov. Chandler promised in his inaugural address to carry out his campaign promises, chief among which was one to undo the work of his predecessor, Gov. Ruby Laffoon, by repealing the State 3 per cent sales tax. The former Governor rode to the capitol with his successor, with whom he has been at odds for three years over various issues. Laffoon bolted Chandler in the recent campaign after Chandler in a double primary beat the Laffoon administration choice for the Democratic Governor nomination. Accusing Chandler of wrecking his own administration, Laffoon asked the people to rebuke him by voting for Judge King Swope, Republican.

Postmaster General James A. Farley and Senator Joseph Guffey, Pennsylvania Democrat, were among the spectators as Laffoon and Chandler drew up before the statue of Gov. William Goebel, assassinated on the capitol steps 35 years ago, in an antique carriage drawn by four dapple gray horses. So was Gov. George H. Earle, of Pennsylvania, and most of Kentucky's Democratic notables.

Streets passed by the procession were flanked by thousands of Kentuckians, cheering their new leader.

Gov. Chandler, the only State executive to be inaugurated this year, was supported by many New Deal leaders, who urged his election as an indorsement of the Roosevelt Administration.

Many of these toys were new, some had been used a little, but they still could bring joy to the hearts of needy children. Persons wishing to contribute toys, old or new, should call Decatur 5130. A Terminal taxicab will call for them and bring them to The Post Building.

Barbara Vickery, 12, of 3311 Cleveland avenue, who with a group of her little friends organized a Santa Claus Aid Circle to help The Post Toy Fund, brought in a bulging box of fine toys and books to Toy Fund headquarters last night. Barbara, a student at the National Cathedral School for Girls, has the assurance that more toys are in sight.

Only 14 days remain until Christmas Eve. In poverty-stricken homes of Washington and vicinity hopes have been kindled since hearing of The Post Fund and the prospects it gives to many needy children of a Merry Christmas this year. Included in the pleas for toys are many pathetic incidents showing the real need existing in the city.

Here is a letter from the father of four telling a tale of woe and hard times:

"In the interest of four children who face a Christmas of want," he wrote to The Post Toy Fund, "I am prompted to write this letter. Owing to bad health I have had a hard time holding a job for any length of time. I still cling to the hope that a job will show up, a job that will be steady so I will be able to get the medical attention I need . . . I am gradually being beaten down, and only the love and respect for my family keeps me from giving up entirely. For over three years now, with the exception of a few months I and my family have had to depend on charity. We have suffered hunger and have been set on the street on two different occasions because I was sick and could not earn enough to pay for food and shelter. I have been compelled to take jobs when I was sick. I have worked on several occasions when I had not eaten for two days. God knows I have tried, and against the worst odds.

"I was laid off about a month ago, after only about two months work. My present position is only part time work.

Berry to Form Council Despite Industry Snub

the fact that industry has regained half its depression losses, while unemployment stands at 74 per cent of the depression low.

A more cheerful note was sounded by the Commerce Department, which said in its monthly survey of business that industrial production in October stood at 96 per cent of the 1923-25 average. In October, last year, it was only 75 per cent. Employment was estimated at 81.6 per cent of the 1923-25 average, compared with 78.4 per cent in October last year. These figures bore out the federation contention that industry is recovering much more rapidly than employment.

December Advance Seen.

"Production in leading industries was maintained during November at the high level reached at the end of the preceding month, and a further advance in the seasonally adjusted index is anticipated for the current month," the Commerce Department review said.

During the first ten months of this year the output of durable goods increased one-fourth as compared with the same period last year, the department found. Farm income, the report said, shows a more than seasonal increase. Increases in stock prices were seen as reflecting a favorable business trend.

Announcing his intention of going ahead with his industrial council, Maj. Berry said:

"Hundreds of telegrams and letters which have come in last night and today indicate that the industry conferences now in session here, which have for their purposes the working out of some solution of the unemployment problem and placing on a safe and stable basis the prosperity which is just now beginning to make itself felt have struck a responsive chord in the minds of thinking men of industry and labor.

"Can't Be Swept Aside."

"These issues cannot be swept aside by political considerations or by unreasoning opposition to a course of action which is destined to cope with industry's problems in the light of solutions that will best guard the entire Nation's welfare.

"Those who waste words quibbling over representation forget that the Government is a partner in this co-operative effort and that it represents all the people. The opinions of any and all persons who are members of large or small units of industry or labor may still be laid before the conference, regardless of the conclusions therein, and will be given careful weight and consideration.

"The progress thus far has clarified the situation somewhat and we are going forward in the work of setting up an industrial council, exactly as originally planned, to apply itself to the great problems of industry which can never be solved without general discussion and general co-operation between leaders of industry, labor and the people."

Labor to Push Bills.

Labor leaders took the opportunity to advance their claims for legislation. William Green, federation president, indicated that labor would push the O'Mahoney bill for licensing industry; would ask for a shorter work week, minimum wage standards for women and minors, elimination of child labor, enforcement of the Wagner labor disputes act and formulation of labor and hour standards by management and labor.

Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of Awerica, said his organization would work through the Berry council for enactment of the Ellenbogen bill for regulation of conditions in the textile industry.

A group representing the construction industry announced it had selected a temporary committee of five to participate in further industrial conferences. At the same time the group sent to Berry a letter severely critical of some New Deal activities.

Asks Definite Program

It asked that federal competition with the construction industries cease and that "a declared Federal policy be established in which the construction industry will have confidence." The letter charged that the government itself had been disregarding NRA code principles, and that relief wages in many cases had equaled or exceeded those paid by the industry.

It asked further:

"That encouragement be given to local determination of fair construction industry practices and labor relations.

"That the threat of pending legislation which would further undermine the construction industry, such as the proposed Black bill, the proposed Walsh bill, etc., be removed.

"That Federal construction programs be coordinated through a single competent Federal works department sympathetic to private enterprise; that permanent committees on construction be established in the Senate and in the House.

Urges Work Relief Cut.

"That Federal financial aid to State, county and municipal works projects be reduced as soon as communities can initiate and finance them according to normal practices.

"That investment of private capital in construction be encouraged through income tax legislation permitting deductions from gross income of amounts invested in construction projects for a period sufficient to re-establish a normal market.

"That in the interest of sound recovery, which involves the revival of private industry, the present government departmental policy of assuming functions, under the guise of emergency, which are normally and properly those of industry, be terminated at once.

Our Income Taxes.

As usual, interest in the published income-tax data, compiled by the Treasury from individual returns covering 1934, is centered upon the highest classifications. But while the statistics undoubtedly reveal a heavy concentration of wealth in the higher brackets, they offer no encouragement to those who rely upon a "soak-the-rich" tax program to yield large Federal revenues.

The information revealed by the tax returns, in fact, proves conclusively that the additional revenue obtainable by levies upon the very rich is a relatively small sum. If all the income reported by persons receiving $100,000 or more were taken by the Federal Government, total receipts would not amount to much more than $400,000,000. And many of these individuals are paying almost confiscatory taxes at the present time.

A further striking fact is that over 2,200,000 persons with incomes under $5,000, who filled out returns, were found to be tax-exempt. Only 1,338,000 persons with net incomes of less than $5,000 paid the small total of $32,506,000 into the Federal Treasury in 1934. Yet these two low-income groups accounted for considerably over half of the net income of $12,456,000,000 reported by all individuals for that year. Thus the taxable total constituted only a small fraction of the estimated $50,000,000,000 of national income received in 1934.

With tax rates in the upper income categories already so high that the point of diminishing returns has been reached, it is obvious that increased returns from income taxation requires heavier levies upon lower groups and a tapping of lower income strata.

Instead, therefore, of commenting upon the few spectacular cases of individuals who receive annual incomes running into hundreds of thousands, even millions, of dollars, it would be much more practical to direct attention to the millions of individuals in comfortable circumstances who make no direct contributions to Government support. A broadening of the income-tax base is not only essential if substantial additions are to be made to income-tax revenues, but it provides the best possible way of curbing excessive governmental extravagance.

When the taxpayer's contribution takes the form of indirect taxes only, he is not merely taxed arbitrarily, without consideration for his ability to pay, but he is often ignorant of the fact that he is paying. When the income-tax base is broadened, as it will have to be, the demand for reasonable economy in Government will become effective.

Short-Sighted Tactics.

Representatives of the unionized anthracite miners are preparing to demand a 30-hour week with "substantial increases" in pay when their present contract expires. At the same time they deplore the fact that unemployed miners, many of whom are union members, have been illegally extracting coal from company lands and selling it through "bootleg" channels. They also charge that the unionized companies have leased coal properties to other concerns not bound by union wage agreements.

But instead of regarding these criticized activities as a warning that mining costs in the unionized field are already unduly high, the miners' representatives propose to raise operating costs still more by insisting upon a 30-hour week. They could hardly have hit upon a surer device for encouraging an expansion of nonunion mining at the expense of unionized mines.

The demand for the 30-hour week, with increases in pay, is based upon the mistaken assumption that in this way work can be spread and unemployment reduced, without a reduction of earnings. If such a policy were universally applied, however, the net result would be to cut down the total output of consumable goods with resultant impoverishment of the Nation. Workers might receive wages nominally as high as before the cut in working hours, but the volume of real wealth would be reduced and consequently real wages would be lowered.

The effect would be different, but no less disastrous if the 30-hour week should be imposed upon a single industry such as anthracite mining, already severely handicapped by the growing competition of other fuels. The resultant increase in production costs, bringing higher prices, would further restrict demands for anthracite and add to existing unemployment within the industry.

What the industry needs is an expansion of its market outlets through a lowering of prices. The program of the miners' union runs directly counter to a rational plan for solving the problems of the industry. For years the anthracite miners have been the victims of short-sighted efforts to increase employment and raise wages, regardless of the effect upon demands for the mined product. Apparently they have not yet learned that such tactics are in considerable part responsible for the failure of the industry to keep pace with the expanding demands for fuel.

Japan's Gloomy Alternative.

The negative response to President Roosevelt's suggestion that navies be trimmed 20 per cent. on the present ratio basis, sets the London naval conference off to a gloomy beginning. British spokesmen intimate that their present navy affords inadequate defense for the Empire. France is concerned over Germany's naval building. Italy is obviously inclined to strengthen her position on the sea. Most important, Japan insists that naval limitations shall continue in effect only on terms that would give that country an absolutely free hand in the Far East.

In these circumstances, the American offer transmitted to the naval conference by Ambassador Davis represents an ideal tenaciously pursued rather than a realistic basis for a new agreement. The logic of the President's argument for naval reduction is inescapable. But unsettled political conditions make logic unacceptable in a 1935 conference. In view of the widespread instability and the tendency to increase rather than reduce navies, the world may count itself lucky if it secures an agreement forbidding construction above existing treaty limits.

The fate of the conference is almost entirely in the hands of Japan. Between the lines of the statement by Mr. Norman Davis is an evident willingness to compromise within the limits of the principle of "relative security." Great Britain would probably modify her building aspirations to secure an agreement. But the Japanese, as Admiral Nagano's brief remarks made plain, are willing to discuss the issue only on their own terms. And those terms can not be accepted without undermining the foundation on which hitherto successful naval limitation has been asked.

Briefly stated, the Japanese plan is a "common limit of naval armaments to be fixed as low as possible" and a drastic cut in "offensive forces." Unfortunately, no reduction can be expected by this method. The "common limit" would necessarily have to be fixed to cover the largest naval power in the world. Then all other "great powers" would have the right to build up to that limit. Enormous construction programs could be immediately expected.

It is not essential to carry the Japanese plan that far, however, to see its inapplicability. Mathematically, equal navies among the great powers would give them vastly unequal defensive strength. To illustrate the unsoundness of that scheme one has only to contrast the compact position of Japan with the British Empire, scattered in all parts of the world. Moreover, Japan is the only great naval power in the Orient. Even now she is taking advantage of that local superiority to pursue a program of unrestrained military aggression in China. Acceptance of the seeming ultimatum she has laid down at London would be tantamount to acquiescence in Tokyo's present policy. That, of course, can not reasonably be asked of the signatories of the Nine Power Treaty which are represented at the London parley.

The conference must be considered, therefore, in terms of alternatives to an agreement along the lines of the Washington Treaty. From this angle the position of Japan becomes extremely weak. While Ambassador Davis clearly announced that this country will not initiate a naval race, he also plainly intimated that existing ratios will be maintained regardless of what Japan does. Breaking down the present system of limitations will not of itself give parity to Tokyo. It would be entirely possible for the Japanese to break down that system and encounter more formidable odds than existed before. The chief hope of achieving anything substantial at the London conference seems to depend upon the effectiveness with which this point is driven home to the Japanese.

Publicity And Duty.

Mr. Crawford Jamieson, as a member of the New Jersey Legislature, threatens to move for an investigation of Gov. Hoffman's action in "reviving the Hauptmann case." This "revival," he intimates, may represent nothing but "exploitation" for the purpose of "providing our Governor with national publicity."

The assemblyman is a political opponent of the executive. What ramifications of factional feeling are involved it is scarcely proper for any outsider to estimate. But the overt acts of the Governor in connection with the Hauptmann case indicate that Mr. Jamieson has a very poor argument.

In his official capacity, Gov. Hoffman presides over the New Jersey Court of Pardons. This body holds the power of life and death for all the State's criminals condemned upon capital charges. Hauptmann stands so condemned. He had appealed to the United States Supreme Court for a review of his case—not of the question of his guilt or innocence, but of the technical regularity of his trial. There was small hope of a review being granted. Meanwhile, therefore, the Governor interviewed the prisoner in his cell and—quite without committal to any opinion—countenanced further investigations.

To unjaundiced eyes, the pursuit of such a course looks uncommonly like the performance of a rudimentary obligation, and this aspect has been heavily emphasized by the Supreme Court's denial of review, as announced yesterday afternoon. Hauptmann's life is now largely in the Governor's hands. He would be derelict in his responsibility if he failed to satisfy his mind on every aspect of the case.

"A Line Of Convenience."

Gathering storms of protest against the recommendations of the District-Virginia Boundary Commission indicate that this agency has succeeded only in intensifying the controversy over ownership of the southern Potomac shore. The commission attempted to resolve one of the most intricate legal questions of the day by a policy of simple expediency, ignoring existing law as well as the interests of the Capital City in the preservation of this important area. For that reason alone its findings are subject to the closest scrutiny.

Chairman Brough frankly admitted that the commission established "a boundary line of convenience." Congress instructed the commission to find "the" boundary line and not to draw a new one. If a "line of convenience" had been desired, it might have been established by a surveyer within a week. Mr. Brough's commission followed the more costly course of hearing testimony for many months, and then sweeping it all aside to draw a somewhat obscure line that completely ignores the basic legal issues involved.

As an example of what this "line of convenience" means, it would cut through the Government's bird refuge at the mouth of Roaches Run. Certainly if the Government is to retain any part of this area, which is really a part of the Potomac River, it should all be considered Federal property, even under a policy of "convenience." As a matter of fact, the Supreme Court has repeatedly held that the District line extends to high-water mark on the Virginia side of the river. When a commission attempts to draw a line at the low-water mark, for the most part, with the provision that it shall run from headland to headland, it sweeps away everything that the courts have decided in the last 75 years.

The question is of especially vital interest to Washington because the river front is the city's outstanding natural attraction. The line proposed by the commission would allow property owners on the Virginia side to build down to the water's edge, without control or regulation by the agencies whose duty it is to protect and beautify the Capital. It would give to Virginia some areas over which the Government has exercised jurisdiction since the District was established, just at a time when those areas are of most importance in the development of the Capital.

It can not even be said that the report offers a compromise, for no area under controversy would be granted to the Government. In this respect the report is so unfair, aside from its shortcomings on the legal side, as to indicate that a new approach will be essential if an equitable settlement is to be made. Fortunately, Attorney General Cummings' criticism of the report indicates that the Government's policy will follow that course.

From A To Z.

The new Washington Telephone Directory has made its appearance and one has only to glance at the bulk of it to understand why the telephone girl of today has no time for exchanging pleasantries with subscribers. Even the cheery "Number please" has been largely supplanted by the thoroughly mechanical dial. Yet every small town in the old days was wont to depend on Central for the time, as well as expecting her to be a combination encyclopedia and almanac. Alas, this personalized service has gone the way of draped mantels and sea shell picture frames.

In neat gray cover, the book appears as utterly prosaic as the dictionary. But to a close observer, the changes in its impersonal listings will provide a better mirror of the changing times than any novel. Only one livery stable is now to be found in the classified section among an overwhelming abundance of garages. Gramophone companies have been largely plowed under, giving way to radio dealers. Apparently four blacksmiths continue to ply their ancient and honorable trade in the District of Columbia. And on the opposite page the Beverage Business has come into its own again.

Like every other telephone directory, this one has a place lined off for so-called Important Telephone Numbers. It is to wonder whether this bit of perennial helpfulness is inserted with sheer optimism, or from a bland disregard of human nature. It's safe to bet that nobody from the AAA to Mr. Zwoyer will make use of it so long as there's a single unscribbled inch on the cover. Incidentally, we can hardly wait to see how our curlicues and triangles are going to look on that nice gray binding.

"Skipping isn't healthful," declares a physician. We've known cases in which it was.

From the Hartford Courant.

A Canadian Press dispatch asserts that within three weeks the Dominion will ship 4,000,000 Christmas trees to the United States, the greater part of them coming from Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick, and that from 200 to 250 carloads will be required for New York City alone. It cannot be denied that the trees add much to the spirit one ought to have in late December, even if the processes of Nature are frustrated in man's desire to bring in pine, spruce and Kalmia to add to his cheer.

Roosevelt In '29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of December 7, F. C. Cody raises an interesting point, but doesn't develop it with sufficient vigor. He asks: What would Roosevelt have done had he been "in" between 1929 and 1933.

My answer is he could not have made a sorrier mess than he has succeeded in doing, with all things in his favor and the depression normally over, but he would have tried hard.

One may judge this from the way he took the NRA setback, or rather, didn't take it. The infectious smile went off duty and venomed speech and sour predictions filled a long press conference. He would have taken the scores of rebuffs handed Hoover on grounds of political expediency with poor grace and ill-concealed exasperation. He'd have protested the politics and selfish propaganda of his opponents as he now does "destructive criticism" and "appeal to narrow-minded prejudice."

In his blanket indictments of the previous administration Roosevelt inadvertently wails loudest of the very back-stage political chicanery that helped catapult him into office.

Favors Night Parking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am for benefiting the traffic conditions in Washington, but for broad-minded and wise regulations instead of radical measures as have been lately suggested.

To prohibit parking to any greater extent than already exists—and to prohibit night parking—would be an unwise and extremely radical measure. About all the advantage of having wider streets on which to travel is to allow more lines of traffic and more passing. And all the advantage of additional lines of traffic is to speed traffic. Why not let people start a few minutes earlier in going places—a few minutes make very little difference in a person's life.

We need more broad-minded, intelligent, dispassionate and unselfish (by self-compulsion) legislators and administrators.

ARNOLD BRADSHAW.
Washington, Dec. 3.

Potato Law Defiance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This being a government of laws, it is with regret that I note the defiance of a law enacted by the Congress as indicated in the following excerpts from a box story appearing in The Post of December 7:

Mrs. Robert L. Bacon, wife of the Representative, will plant her crop in the front lawn of her home at 1801 F street northwest.

Mrs. George Horace Lorimer will do her potato farming at her Philadelphia home.

It was Mrs. Bacon who said that Secretary Wallace would be "sure to see" her protest potatoes.

These good women are wholly within their rights in opposing any and all New Deal legislation. But they are not setting a wholesome example when they proclaim themselves defiers of any law.

OSCAR M. DUGGER.
Washington, Dec. 7.

The Hit-Run Age.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As I read about the traffic death toll soaring on above the hundred mark in Washington I naturally notice more closely things that deal with the problem.

In an automobile ad in a popular magazine I read: "Americans are 'mile-a-minute' drivers—as much as we deplore it. People will drive fast. For every careful driver there are hundreds high-balling over the highways at 60, 70, and even 80! So one company claims to have made a "safe" car, as if there is such a thing as safety in automobiles going at 60, 70 and 80 miles an hour!

Then, in a newspaper article, Mr. William A. Van Duzer, Washington traffic director, writes: "What is needed, in my opinion, is more thorough education of all drivers to avoid accidents, and swift, certain and vigorous punishment for those who refuse to be educated." I agree with Mr. Van Duzer. Is it not more logical to turn out "safe" drivers for so-called "safe" cars than it is to turn out "safe" cars for reckless drivers?

I would like to see the governments in different cities tighten down on reckless drivers and traffic violators so much that there would actually be a large revenue coming in from the fixing of fines. It would not be long until the death rate would become lower. As it now is—someone breaks a traffic law, gets caught. He is taken into traffic court—and, in too many cases, let off, or given a small fine. When the violator gets out of the door he is ready to go at it again.

What is going to be done about this "hit-run" business? It is altogether too frequent.

JAMES NOLAN.
Washington, Dec. 3.

Invitations To Revolt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the people who claim a revolution was averted by President Roosevelt would examine more closely the causes that bring about social upheaval, they would discover that revolutions are almost invariably produced by excessive taxation and unbridled spending.

The French revolution occurred when the rulers indulged in fiscal prodigality, adding such burdens of taxation, the populace rebelled and threw off the yoke. Those familiar with American history have not forgotten the Boston Tea Party, when red-blooded men refused to recognize a burdensome tax and consigned shipments of tea to "Davy Jones' locker."

Growing resentment in our country over excessive taxation is especially in evidence in California. It does not require any great stretch of imagination to picture the revolt spreading.

It would seem the safest and sanest way to prevent social disorder would be to balance the budget, reduce taxation and discontinue an orgy of spending that has no parallel in history.

Cheers For Povich.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For every drop of German blood that's in me here are three cheers for Shirley Povich's article in The Post of December 6. That's written like a sportsman. His last words about Herr Hitler deserve to be framed.

It is sad, however, that the same sportsman spirit is not applied when there is question of international football games.

Victim Of The "Black Code"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of December 9, entitled "Carpetbaggers' Memento," is not up to your usual standard of accuracy in reciting historical events or of acumen in appraising them. The readers of your editorial are led to believe that the statute under which Angelo Herndon was convicted was passed during the days of reconstruction when the Southern whites were driven to desperate means to rid themselves of the rule of the "carpetbagger" and the "scalawag." To bolster up your contention, you referred to the grotesque and scandalous transactions of the reconstruction regime so graphically depicted in Claude Bowers' "Tragic Era." With a naivete, of which you would not ordinarily be suspected, you quote approvingly Mr. Bowers' words: "the legislature over which the notorious Bullock cracked his whip was a cross between a gambling den and a colored camp meeting." This description is picturesque, indeed, but wholly inapropos.

The statute under which Angelo Herndon was convicted was passed in 1866, two years before the reconstruction experiment. "Black Reconstruction," by W. E. B. DuBois, recites: "the constitution of Georgia was adopted April 20, 1868, and Rufus B. Bullock was elected Governor. Bullock is usually classed as a "carpetbagger," but he lived in Georgia before the war and was an officer in the Confederate Army. "The fact is, Herndon is a victim of the "black code" passed by the native whites of Georgia immediately after the thirteenth amendment, setting forth their method of dealing with the freedmen who had been emancipated by the Federal Government against their will. These "black codes," passed by the Southern States, reduced the Negro to a state of virtual slavery more debasing than that from which Lincoln had freed him.

Had the South met Abraham Lincoln's friendly gesture half way and recognized that the intention of the thirteenth amendment was to free the Negro in fact as well as in form, the reconstruction experiment would probably never have been tried. The much denounced reconstruction regime, God knows, has faults enough for which it might be justly held accountable without making its burdens heavier than they are. It certainly requires neither originality nor magnanimity to recite its shortcomings. But the whites of the South, as well as its "carpetbagger" and "scalawag" exploiters, must share the responsibility for the crimes, scandals and grotesque excesses which characterized the pre-reconstruction as well as the reconstruction regime, and its tragic aftermath.

The supreme court of Fulton County has declared the infamous law under which Herndon was convicted and sentenced to the chain gang for 20 years to be contrary both to the State and the Federal constitution. This humane decision points out the wisdom of casting into oblivion both the sins of pre-reconstruction and the reconstruction misdeeds. KELLY MILLER.

The Post Impressionist

Justice And Edith Maxwell.

Post Office, Wednesday.

THERE is—you must have frequently heard it declared—a prevalent feeling that the ballad, if not dead in America, lingers in districts remote from the centers of national life. According to all poetry-professors and most poets, this verse-form, which should spring spontaneously from the soil and concern itself with primitive emotions leading to primitive action, can't thrive in districts highly civilized.

You remember what Sainte-Beuve wrote about writing as the grass grows. Well, the grass isn't growing in our cities' streets—yet. And the kind of grass that grows in our city-parks, or even in the woods and meadows between our too frequent cities, isn't the right kind of grass for a ballad's cud.

At least, so the poetry-professors tell us.

We argued that most of the human race has, deep down, escaped sophistication, and that the sophistication of the rest of the race was pretty superficial. We argued that crime is still no rarity, that the majority of crimes are simple expressions of simple emotions, and that people think lyrically about such emotions, and about such expressions of them: in other words, in ballad-form.

We argued that the only reason the resultant ballads were not seen by the skin-deep sophisticate was that the ballad-makers preferred the living voice to the printed page. But we hoped for an exception.

Then, luckily—for our thesis—Edith Maxwell killed her father. Now, not from the mountains where she lived, but from Hancock, Md., near to Washington, comes just the authentic ballad which just such events always used to produce.

It comes in the mail.

It is signed "George Rash."

It is called "Justice and Edith Maxwell."

And here it is.

Twenty-five years in prison cell
She's cruelly doomed to spend;
Sentenced there for so-called crime
For which she cannot amend.

Forbade by a tyrannic father
To stay out in dark of night,
She heeded not the despots' law
But yielded to freedom's right.

In his fiendish rage he staggered
And lunged at her with a knife;
Tearing her hair, beating her head;
Designing on her very life.

Attacked by a drunken father
Who would his grown daughter beat,
Would a self-respecting woman
Beg forgiveness at his feet?

Fighting in despair for her life,
She struck her shoe at his head.
He released her grasp and fell back
And within a hour was dead.

For human life and human rights
She dealt a blow in defense;
Now to dwell behind prison bars
That has been her recompense!

Ah, dare you call it justice?
Right thinking people say no!
Justice is abashed to receive
This foul and traitorous blow!

It cries from the souls of women
Who in freedom have a seat.
It speaks from the hearts of men
Who wouldn't fall at drunkards' feet.

Tho' oft one must strike in defense
By law of self-preservation;
And from this law innate in man
There is no deviation!

Is it not that justice insures
Freedom from feudal law?
Would it uphold honor, and right
Of defense 'gainst drunkard's claw?

Justice cries from all who know truth
In silent indignant pain
At this debasing mockery

Cruelty to Oysters.

The Buddhist-Promoted China Society for Protection of Animals has issued a booklet setting forth the cruelties commonly practiced.

In its last annual report the World Buddhist Laymen's Association records the liberation of large numbers of horses, sheep, cattle and fowl destined for slaughter.

Fish and even oysters and clams have come under the benevolent influence of Buddhist "compassion," for 84,470 pounds of fish and 176,419 pounds of bivalves are listed as having been saved from death and eventual assimilation in the alimentary canals of Chinese gourmets.

Thought He Needed It.

A bachelor who lodges in a quiet square keeps himself fit by donning running shorts in the evening and going for an hour's trot round several streets.

One night, while in athletic garb, he was hailed in anguished tones by a woman. On slowing down he discovered it was his laundress, who gasped out: "O, I'm sorry I'm late this week, sir, but if you'll go back home at once I'll promise you your washing tomorrow morning first thing."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Italy No Greener.

WITH due allowance for all the paved highways, public buildings and railway stations which Mussolini has built and for his feat of teaching ignoramuses to read and the whole Italian Nation to hate Englishmen, there are still some phases of life in Italy which might deter even the most piteous American tax slave from renouncing his citizenship and filing an application in Rome.

The beautiful highways are closed to all but official motor traffic, because the leader who built them also built up a war which is consuming all available fuel. Public buildings are full of officeholders, including the same proportion of yes-men, chair-warmers and other deserving party members that are to be found in offices of the New Deal in Washington, D. C.

The Italian tax slave is paying bills even as his brother in bondage on the other side of the water. He, too, pays an income tax on his windows and on desserts which are put on the table in his home.

And though education is indeed a wonderful thing in the case of the humble shepherd on the hillside, who now reads newspapers instead of drowsing the hours away, this huddled figure, as ignorant as his own sheep, is less triumphant on closer consideration. The case of the humble shepherd on the hillside is one which has been cited often by enthusiastic party members.

• • • •

IN the days before Mussolini he was without pride of race or interest in current events. Now he walks erect, with fire in his eye, valor and patriotism in his heart and a confused jumble of hatreds in his brain. There are 50 hatreds in all, beginning with England and continuing down the list of nations which voted sanctions against Italy.

True, he reads the papers now instead of snoozing in the folds of his cape. But they are Italian papers which are censored and deliberately calculated to impose on his new intelligence, to increase in his mind the importance of certain issues and events.

It would be foolish to deny that it is a great spiritual pleasure to hate the English. Americans have done this and found it good fun from time to time, ever since Bunker Hill. Germans a few years ago could hate the English from a standing start with a fury which makes the present Italian wrath seem quite mild distaste, although the Italians are picking up speed and style in their hatred. But the Germans found there was no profit in it, and they are a practical people who don't leave off their hating until they have explored every possibility.

• • • •

THOSE ardent party members whom it has been my privilege to observe and interview all belong to the very comfortable class who doubtless pay the taxes they are unable to avoid, even as the American tax slaves. They have jobs and money to spend, and it's much more prudent and profitable to belong to the party than to be excluded from it.

Certainly this system has eliminated much lost motion. They have no filibusters in the Italian government and there is no need for a Congressional Record, with all its expense, because there are no debates. Nobody argues with Mussolini.

But granting all these great improvements, Italy is still no better off in these matters than the United States with its noble institutions, graft and incompetency. It cannot be claimed that Italy has as much education as we. America's democratic highways are as good as Mussolini's dictatorial roads, and there are more of them. American public buildings are bigger, more numerous and equipped with deserving party members just as regular in their way as Fascisti are in theirs. And the American public debt, like American education, is bigger in gross figures, though possibly not as large per capita.

• • • •

MUSSOLINI has rallied Italians together, with certain exceptions, and made them ambitious for their country. Americans, on the other hand, agree among themselves that their country is in terrible shape. At worst she is better off than Italy at the best.

In the present unanimity of patriotism and hatred, Italians, however, have got themselves in a war, while Americans are too sore at one another to give any attention to outsiders, thus obviating serious danger.

There is one phase in which the American situation is distinctly preferable. Although the Democratic party holds office, Republicans still have certain legal economic rights and may not be put away on an island merely for speaking out of turn. It is not treason to the state to call Mr. Roosevelt a spendthrift or even a crackpot, and certain Republicans have availed themselves of that right frequently in the last few years.

No member of the opposition party would even consider such desperate folly in Italy. But then there is no opposition party.

The New Philippines

Economics, Defense Next Problems Of Independence.

The first article in this series from the Manila correspondent of The Post, flown to Washington via the China Clipper, was printed yesterday.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Manila.

IN many ways the Filipinos have pursued their separatist objective by following the old adage that one should not cross his bridges before coming to them. To state that they have given only cursory thought to the problems of economics and national defense under independence is to state the truth. These two problems are today giving them the most worry.

The economic problem is the more immediately urgent. Under the provisions of the independence law, the Philippines have been placed on strict quota limitations, namely 850,000 tons of duty-free sugar, 200,000 tons of coconut oil, and 3,000,000 pounds of cordage. Any shipments to America in excess of these figures pay the full American duty, and, after the fifth year of the Commonwealth, Philippine shipments within the duty-free quota will pay an ascending export tax which in the ninth year shall amount to 25 per cent of the full duty. Upon the establishment of the republic supplanting the Commonwealth, all Philippine products, upon entering an American port, will pay the full American duty. The prospect of losing the American market as thus decreed in the law is a nightmare to the Filipinos.

• • • •

AND it is quite natural that they should be so alarmed. For, while the independence law enables the Filipinos to continue building by themselves on the educational and political structures set up by America, it wrecks the entire economic foundation and forces the Filipinos to begin from scratch. The entire economic system of the Philippines is predicated on the free access of its production to the American market. Free trade has established complete market dependence of the islands upon the United States. Unfortunately, free trade was imposed upon the Filipinos. When the Philippine Assembly, in a concurrent resolution, opposed its establishment. Congress, acting like an all-wise mother, jammed it down the throat of the sullen Filipino.

Closing of the American market to Philippine products leaves to the islands the alternative of opening up new foreign markets. According to those who have studied the matter, however, the present lines of Philippine export are not the kind in demand anywhere else. Furthermore, the Philippine cost of production is so much higher than those of other countries producing the same articles that Philippine products could not possibly stand fair competition in the open world market.

For this reason the Filipinos accepted the independence law with a strong mental reservation on its economic provisions, and only after President Roosevelt had promised to call an American-Philippine economic conference to make the necessary adjustments. The Filipinos have pinned all their hope of economic salvation upon this conference. They regard it as so crucial to the success of the Commonwealth that both President Quezon and High Commissioner Murphy may represent them in its deliberations.

BUT it is obvious that they are going to this conference prepared not to appeal to American altruism, as of old, but to American self-interest as befits a nation only ten years away from its complete independence. Reciprocity is their talking point. They will seek to keep as much of the free trade as possible, but they will also offer a better-protected Philippine market to American manufacturers. They will point, furthermore, to the added advantage of American predominance of the Philippine market in view of its nearness to the billion-dollar Chinese market. They will, in short, discard the altruism plea and utilize the strictly business-like approach, which is equally effective in American salesmanship.

Meanwhile the Philippine Commonwealth is directly taking the leadership in the development of old and new Philippine industries. "The government is definitely going into business," President Quezon announced to some 24 American publishers, editors, and correspondents just a few days after he had been inducted into office. As far as it can be gleaned from the President's utterances—and there has not been time for anything but utterances—the government's economic program will be aimed at mass prosperity, but if possible, it will follow the line of least resistance and base itself upon the American market. In the absence of the American market, then it would encourage the development of industries primarily producing articles for home consumption.

Now, the Philippine government has long been in business. For two decades, it has owned the majority stocks of a bank, sugar centrals, a railroad, a cement factory, a hotel, and other commercial enterprises. Through the National Development Co. the government has employed government capital to foment business and industry with varying successes. At the beginning, it lost tremendously in the bank. It has sunk millions in a coal mining firm and has practically given up its operation. At present, it is making considerable profits in the bank, in the hotel, in the railroad, and in the cement factory.

• • • •

IT will be recalled that the government's policy of going into business was the most-criticized part of Harrison's administration. When Gen. Leonard Wood and former Governor General W. Cameron Forbes investigated the Philippines before the Republican administration supplanted the Democratic regime, the government losses had not been recovered. The initial mistakes in a bold experiment were still being paid for. Then, too, American public opinion was against the policy. Until President Roosevelt altered things with his alphabetical instrumentalities, the American view favored as much elbow-room as possible for private business and abhorred every idea of the government going into business.

Perhaps President Quezon, in unhesitatingly announcing his policy, believes that the Philippine government's experiment has been largely successful. Perhaps, also, he is aware of the somewhat changing American attitude, largely a concession to the Roosevelt Administration.

Quezon further justifies his policy by pointing out that politics will be separate and apart from the business ventures of the government. The government, he said, will simply purchase shares of stock of the National Development Co., and through this organization, he and his economic advisers will engage in business. More than ever, the National Development Co. will be run as a holding and operating firm but exactly as a private business, except that the president of the Commonwealth will vote the majority stocks in every case.

• • • •

IT IS understood by all that the gradual deprivation of the Philippines of the American market is intended to force the islands to build a more or less independent economic structure. This is as it should be. But there is present the danger that if the Commonwealth is hard-pressed, it may resort to economic nationalization.

Business feeds the public coffers. If the industries which now contribute the bulk of Philippine taxes are crippled as a result of the loss of the American market, the Commonwealth may not seek taxes but profit by direct control of all profitable industries. The mining industry, especially gold, will be the most tempting, since gold has a constant value. Its nationalization may result in the raising of the necessary revenue for the government.

The talk of opening up new or dead industries like the raising of cotton, of nuts, and of indigo, are at best theoretical. Their market value abroad is negligible, and the local demand, at least for the present, is more cheaply met with importations. It is significant that President Quezon ended his conference with the American press delegation at the inauguration of the Commonwealth with a direct plea to the American press to help present to the American people the Philippine side of Philippine-American economics.

"You have come," he declared, "more or less, to witness the culmination of a joint experiment. The Commonwealth we have just set up is a source of pride for both our peoples. It is conceived in altruism.

"But the same altruism established the free trade between our countries; the desire to bring prosperity to the Filipinos brought us dependence upon the American market. Unless this phase of the matter is properly handled, the experiment may not be completely successful. I appeal to you to bring our side to the attention of the American people.

"In fact, our future economic relationship can be mutually beneficial. In the Islands, America has a profitable market."

TRUTH to tell, the Philippine market is not so attractive to the United States as it might be. The balance of a yearly trade of about $150,000,000 is invariably overwhelmingly in favor of the Philippines. Japanese goods, furthermore, keep flooding the islands to such an extent that the United States Department of State recently had to negotiate an agreement with Tokyo regarding the Japanese share of the Philippine textile market. Of course, when the Filipinos talk of continuing a reciprocal trade arrangement with the United States, they imply eagerness to protect the island market for American products.

In the attempt at protection, tariffs will probably prove little of an obstacle to Japanese articles, and in the case of export quotas there is always the likelihood of evasion. Under the present textile agreement, for instance, Japanese textile exporters ship beyond their quota limit by dumping their goods at Hongkong, a free port, and thence trans-shipping them to Manila. A sufficiently protected Philippine market for Ameircan goods would probably absorb less exports than its present capacity, but its value to America would grow with the years. On the other hand, whenever America abandons the Philippine market she invariably does so in favor of Japan.

If there is any remaining uncertainty in the Philippine situation it resides in the minds of economic-minded Filipinos and revolves around the ultimate economic policy of America in the Philippines. The economic problem is the more immediately urgent, since its repercussions are not only to be immediately felt, but will grow in severity as the years pass. The implied forthcoming changes in the American economic policy preclude the immediate adoption of concrete economic plans in Manila. Therefore, in the economic sense, the Filipinos are both anxious and expectant.

Dear Philosophy.

LET no man turn away from "American Philosophy: Today and Tomorrow" (Lee Furman, $3.75, a symposium of 25 young American philosophers edited by Horace M. Kallen and Sidney Hook, just because he thinks of philosophy as big words agitating themselves in a cosmic void. The instinct of the average man to avoid such goings-on is sound enough, heaven knows. And he needn't feel that he is thus indicated as depressingly "average"—two not inconsiderable civilizations agree with him. The Hindus hold that the effort of the intellect to understand the world is a noble and amusing folly, and one has only to read Dr. Lin Yutang's very wise book, "My Country and My People," to see how poorly the Chinese regard all "isms" and hair-splitting. In so far as philosophy is bloodless and heartless, it is just like chess, really rather absurd.

But do not let me repeat, run off from "American Philosophy." Some, not all, of these philosophers have discovered a piece of wisdom 24 centuries old. When Plato was asked why he visited the city of Syracuse, Sicily, time and again, he replied that if he did not do so, he feared that he should find himself at last altogether nothing but words.

It is the great merit of some of these philosophers—I do not say this entirely without irony—that now and again they visit the country of America.

• • • •

THE adventure of this volume, and it will give your brains a very fine stretch indeed, lies in the variety of the contributors. The editors sought out men of all credos, from technology to Catholicism, who had not previously given any great airing to their views. Thus we do not find Dewey and Whitehead, for example—but we do have a group (such is the obscurity of philosophers that only Harry A. Overstreet, Will Durant, Arthur E. Morgan, of TVA, and the two editors from the New School of Social Research may well be named) which displays a great range of thinking and a great range of attitude toward the problems of philosophy.

The adept in philosophy (academic brand), who rolls "isms" on his tongue with the greatest of ease, will value the volume as a chart of current systems. The layman, who most pardonably will shy off from such a chapter title as "The Ontological Status of Value," has only to look a little farther for wit and wisdom.

• • • •

READING the volume, I marked enough sagacious and stirring passages to fill three columns of newsprint. Here are philosophers, not defining the purpose of the atom or slicing the word "reality" as a butcher slices chipped beef, but getting down to brass tacks on our human problems here and now in a depressed America and a chaotic world.

And yet the passage I want to quote is not directly didactic. It is merely a metaphysician's defense of metaphysics—the subject which Voltaire defined thus: "When he to whom one speaks does not understand, and when he who speaks does not understand himself"—by means of an offense aimed at our "plain workaday world." Hear how Harry Todd Costello, professor at Trinity College, gives the lie to philosophic thought as being dry as dust.

"ST. THOMAS AQUINAS," he writes with a merry pen, "took great interest in the ways and variations of those disembodied personalities, the angels. Perhaps if he was back among us, he might be persuaded to write a book on corporations. These also are disembodied personalities. The corporations take shelter in the crannies of our law, in the refuge prepared for those other aliens among us, the Negroes. The State, like Frankenstein bade them be, but scarcely dare exorcise them away again. Yet they are rather ill-treated among us.

"If an ordinary man's debts double, we do not say, 'Look, how proserous he has become!' But the corporation's stock is a debt against the corporation, and a queer debt, for which the corporation very probably never got much of anything in the first place. Yet let it jump from 50 to 100 on the market, and all the friends of the corporation gather round and chant for joy.

"These friends who own this stock even claim to own the corporation, and property is a great thing, as we all know, for he who owns property takes care of it. But let the poor corporation get into trouble, and these caretakers dump their stock on the market and hastily disappear. An owner is supposed to manage. But there are kind people who take this burden off the stockholders' hands, being assisted by a higher order of angels, the holding companies. These are spiritual beings of such power, like Archimedes' lever, that if a man had a long enough chain and hierarchy of them, and $10 in cash, he could run the country. That is, provided nothing slips. Of course, if something does slip, one may have to take hasty refuge in the eastern Mediterranean . . . If you sell bad stock, you take some money out of your victim's pocket and put it into your's, a simple process and wicked. But if it is good stock that you sell, you mortgage the future of some corporation. You put a permanent burden on industry and take the proceeds away for yourself—and this is supposed to be good. On the whole, I think Aquinas was happier with his angels."

Well, if you disagree, Prof. Costello has at least given your cortex a fillip. And if you agree, you will see that the clear and searching voice of philosophy made humane, as sounds many a time in this volume, has something to tell all of us.

Home Projects Hit Half Billion, FHA's '36 Goal

November Spurt Heralds Boom; $1,150,000,000 More Believed Expended.

Because of a November spurt in home modernization and repairs, Housing Administration officials announced yesterday that total business done under the national housing act has passed the half-billion-dollar mark. They previously had not hoped to attain this goal until next spring. In addition to this figure, another $1,150,000,000 worth of home modernization, repair and replacement work is estimated to have been stimulated by the Housing Administration.

"All this business," said Stewart McDonald, Housing Administrator, "was done by private capital released through banks, trust companies, building and loan associations, finance companies, mortgage companies and other private financial institutions, under the housing act."

State and local housing directors in addition report to him that "for every insured dollar, five times that much provided through other financing has gone into such work," McDonald added.

"Residential construction," McDonald said, "has been revived to such an extent that authorities in the field are predicting a boom. The worst of old financing abuses—which in effect were methods of taking homes away from people—have been eliminated. The home financing system has been put on a basis that will weather future storms. It is enabling the renter to become an owner."

45 States in Line.

When the housing act was passed 18 months ago, it had many hurdles in its path, McDonald said. Forty-five States changed their mortgage laws last winter to conform with its provisions. Meanwhile a scientific system of appraisal and underwriting was set up in 64 branch underwriting offices. The men in charge of them were given an intensive preliminary course of training.

Although the first home mortgages were selected for appraisal in December, 1934, not until last April, when most States had passed enabling laws, did the machinery begin to handle mortgages in volume.

"It has set new standards for home construction," the administration said. "Second and third mortgage 'rackets' have been eliminated. Throughout the country private lending agencies have fallen in line with Government standards and are making long-term monthly repayment mortgage loans.

"The old-style short-term double and triple mortgage system is on its way out. This probably has been our biggest achievement. People can now buy homes and pay for them in monthly installments just like rent."

McDonald predicted that more than 175,000 homes would be built next year and that the number of low-cost housing projects under the Federal Housing Administration will be quadrupled soon. He also emphasized that all projects under his administration are "privately owned, financed by private capital and privately operated. The Housing Administration's only financial function is to insure the mortgage—after it has investigated and approved the project, its site, the builder's plans, its rental scale and its management."

The half-billion-dollar total was attained on December 9 and its breakdown follows: modernization and repair notes, $234,105,461; home mortgages appraised with fees paid, $240,597,352; low-cost housing projects insured, $27,030,234; grand total, $501,733,047.

N. Y. Sets Flag Size For Public Meetings

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The board of aldermen decreed today that an American flag, measuring at least 36 by 48 inches, must be displayed henceforth at all public assemblages where "political or public" questions are discussed.

As the proposal came out of committee it referred to meetings "on a public street or in a public place." To this the board added the words "tent or shed."

Davis Named Judge To Succeed Grubb

Birmingham Bar President Appointed by Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt late yesterday appointed David J. Davis, of Birmingham, as United States district judge for the Northern District of Alabama, succeeding the late Judge William I. Grubb, who ruled against New Deal acts on more than one occasion.

Davis, a native of Alabama, received his law degree from Yale University. He was president of the Birmingham Bar Association in 1931, and now serves on the executive committee of that organization.

He was named this year as a special attorney of the Department of Justice to assist in legal matters pertaining to the housing and slum-clearance project at Birmingham, and still serves in that capacity.

Senator Skeptical Of Neutrality Law

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 10.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., today said no effective neutrality law could be maintained by the United States if discretion to determine the aggressor in war was lodged with the executive branch of the Government.

In an interview in which he predicted action by the next Congress on a new neutrality policy, the son and namesake of the late Senator, who fought bitterly against this country's participation in the World War, discussed his father's viewpoints.

He said the elder La Follette had pointed the way to many of the proposals now being made to keep America out of foreign wars. He added that real neutrality would be achieved only if the Nation's farmers, workers and business men were willing to pay the price it imposes.

Utilities' Offer To Speed Tests Given to SEC

Silence Greets Suggestion That '3 or 4' Suits Decide Issues.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission greeted with silence yesterday the offer of a utility industry spokesman to pare down the multiplicity of court suits to test the holding company act to "three or four typical companies."

The commission has insisted that the test be made on the single case of the Electric Bond & Share, bulwarking that insistence by a request for a District of Columbia Supreme Court order to stay all other actions.

Yesterday's offer of the utilities came in a public statement of Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives. Officials of the commission said they had not received a direct offer from Gadsden. Saying they would not comment under those circumstances, they indicated a lack of interest in the offer.

Gadsden Questions Fairness.

"For the commission to now single out one company from the whole industry and start suit against it does not necessarily constitute a fair test of any remaining issues," Gadsden's statement said of the SEC action brought under the provision of the act permitting suit if it thinks a company likely to violate the law. "There are several types of electric utility systems, widely different in their structures and in the relationships with their subsidiaries.

"It should not be difficult to select suits brought by three or four typical companies and push them forward as rapidly as possible. The rights of litigants in other cases could be protected in the meantime by temporary injunctions granted without opposition. That is what the utility industry is willing, and, in its own interest and in the interest of the company at large, anxious to do."

Clock Upsets Time Element In Loring Case

Erring Timepiece Alters Calculation of Family's Movements.

A clock in the home of murdered Corinna Loring, which runs alternately fast and slow, has thrown into confusion the stories of all members of the family regarding events on November 4, the night that Corinna was strangled.

The clock, placed on a buffet in the dining room of the Loring home, 3110 Beech street, Mount Rainier, was a half hour fast the night the girl disappeared from her home, it was learned.

As a result of this disclosure, the stories of all members of the household have been revised. Lieut. Joseph Itzel, head of the squad seeking the slayer, has begun an intensive re-check of the story of Richard Tear, 29-year-old St. Elizabeth's Hospital attendant. Tear was to have married Corinna two days after she disappeared from her home.

The change in the time element of the stories was caused when Leo LoJacono, Corinna's brother-in-law, disclosed that he had arrived home in Anacostia at 7:50 p. m. that night, while it had previously been his belief that he had left Corinna's home at that time.

Clock Read 7:50.

In his earlier story, LoJacono told Lieut. Itzel that it was his impression that the Loring clock read 7:50 as he prepared to leave the home. After discussing the events of that night with his landlord, he informed Lieut. Itzel that it must have been about 7:20 or 7:25, when he left the Lorings

Ordinarily, LoJacono said, it takes him 20 to 25 minutes to drive from the Loring place to his home in the 3300 block Brothers place southeast. On that night, he recalls, he made two stops, which might have extended the time of the trip to a half hour.

LoJacono is certain that he arrived at his home about 7:50 because a radio program which his landlord listens to every Monday night at 7:45 had just started. The landlord's wife was preparing to leave for church services, which begin at 8 o'clock.

Tear Requestioned.

Lieut. Itzel, who is still checking on stories of all intimates of Corinna, called Tear to Marlboro yesterday and questioned him for more than an hour. Itzel would not disclose the nature of the conversation.

Mrs. Loring, the girl's mother, was preparing to leave for church services when the LaJaconos left the house. She does not recall that she was guided by the clock on that night; but the clock which does stay in her memory is that in the church. Her arrival, according to the church clock, was 8:07, and services had already started.

After the LoJaconos left the Loring home, Mrs. Loring says, she finished dressing for church. Then she read a serial story in a newspaper.

She does not recall whether she did any additional reading of the paper, but her recollection is that she left for church some minutes before services started. It is about a ten-minute walk to the church.

Maxwell Girl's Fight for Liberty Renewed in Court Tomorrow

Judge Will Be Asked to Set Aside 25-Year Term for Killing Father.

By Virginia Lee Warren,
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 10.—In the same small courtroom where, three weeks ago, Edith Maxwell heard tall, elderly Judge H. A. Skeen sentence her to a quarter of a century behind the bars of prison, lawyers will argue, on the day after tomorrow, that she should have a new trial on the charge of patricide.

Judge Skeen, known throughout the hill country as a just judge, will be asked to set aside the verdict reached by a jury of elderly men. Defense counsel have completed their briefs and are ready to stand before the bar of justice to plead the case of the former school teacher which has attracted the attention of the Nation.

Should the 76-year-old judge decide that there is legal reason why Edith should be retried for killing her father during a quarrel over her staying out at night, Edith will have her second chance at the March sitting of the court to assert that the killing was done in self-defense.

But if the pleas fail, she cannot be brought to trial again until next autumn, after the Court of Appeals has ruled on the defense motion. And such a ruling could not be made until the Court of Appeals sits next June.

"She'll most likely be convicted again," is the comment heard on every side. "A girl can't kill her pappy 'round here and then come free."

Because of the force and extent of this sentiment, the young school teacher's attorneys believe she'd better stay in jail until she is again called into court to tell how she whacked her drunken father on the head with a slipper one night last July when he tried to beat her and threatened to kill her for staying out after dark.

The girl, since her conviction by a jury of mountaineers on a first-degree murder charge, has not been eligible for release on bond. Before her trial, Judge Skeen set her bail at $5,000. By the time the Maxwells had arranged to raise that amount, Edith's attorneys decided she was safer in her dark, basement cell.

That sentiment has not changed. It flares as hotly now as it did when Edith Maxwell was led off to jail. And so, even if Judge Skeen on Thursday grants her a new trial and makes her eligible for release on bond, her attorneys will probably advise against that sort of freedom.

"Some of the people around here would be sure to talk to her and get her to say things that would be used against her at the next trial," said one of the Maxwell lawyers, A. A. Skeen, today.

"Yes," said R. P. Bruce, another of Edith's atorneys. "From the way folks around here feel about the whole thing, she'd better stay right over there in the jail until we can get her another hearing."

The Post's Edith Maxwell Defense Fund passed the $600 mark yesterday when seven persons sent checks for $20.75, bringing the total received to date to $605.58.

Lawyer Assails Popular Ballot Naming Judges

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

The Arlington County Bar Association voted yesterday to act at its January meeting on a resolution offered by Arthur C. Stickley 2d opposing the popular election of any judicial officer of the Commonwealth. The action was taken at the meeting held at the courthouse.

The resolution asks for expediting the administration of justice and independence of the judiciary. It also recommends the circuit and corporation judges and the justices of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia be elected by the General Assembly, and that sections 91 and 99 of the constitution be amended accordingly.

It further stated that the election of judicail officers of the Commonwealth by popular vote would tend to destroy the independence of the judiciary, making the judges dependent upon popular approval.

Attorneys Thomas W. Philips and Frank L. Ball were appointed a special committee to draft suitable resolutions commending the services of Frederick W. Richardson, who at the age of 82 retires on January 1 as clerk of the court of Fairfax County after a service of 45 years.

John Paul Jones was unanimously re-elected president of the Young Democratic Club of Arlington County at its annual meeting held Monday night in Clarendon.

Other officers elected were Stewart Richardson, first vice president; Leon Turnburke, second vice president; Myrtle McDonald, secretary; Helen Cranston, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth Tallman, treasurer; Charles Meyer, parliamentarian, and James C. Buchanan, sergeant-at-arms.

J. M. Hagan, district highway engineer, was in Arlington County yesterday and, with R. I. Mount, resident highway engineer, and C. L. Kinnier, county engineer, made the final field inspection over the proposed route of the Lee boulevard from Lyon Park to the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

Following the filing of his report to the State highway commission at Richmond, which he said will be done immediately, it is expected that the State will advertise for bids for the completion of the boulevard. The boulevard now stops in the middle of a field at Lyon Park.

G. B. Potterton, zoning engineer, calls attention to all persons who contemplate building in Arlington County to first obtain a permit from the office of the county manager for their own protection. Potterton stated that recently it has been necessary to have some buildings moved back upon the proper building line, as they did not conform with the zoning ordinance.

The board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, meeting last night in Clarendon, appointed a special committee headed by Louis C. Carl to investigate the county electric light rates. The committee also was instructed to look into the question of requesting the Potomac Electric Light and Power Co. to extend its lines throughout the county.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Barcroft School will meet in the school auditorium tonight at 8 o'clock.

J. T. Kingsley, secretary of the Federal Savings and Loan Association, located in Clarendon, is announced as the guest speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon meeting to be held today in the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Extra Tax Fought By Power Company

PEPCO Asks District Court to Withhold Payment.

In an attempt to avoid an extra assessment of $43,000 on its income for the fiscal year ended last June, the Potomac Electric Power Co. late yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to enjoin the District government from collecting the tax while the merits of the case were being fought out in court.

The company stated it had paid income tax to the District for all revenues derived here and was now being subjected to a further tax on income derived from Maryland assets. This, the company contended, is illegal.

Through its attorneys, the company said it had sought to negotiate the matter with the District and had been informed certain assets would be seized in satisfaction of the bill if it were not promptly paid. In the last year, the Pepco paid a tax of $358,060.90 and the tax levied on its Maryland holdings would bring the amount to almost $400,000.

Fairfax County WPA Program Is Inaugurated

Projects Include Librarian Training and Advisory Housekeepers.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.

The Works Progress Administration is sponsoring a number of activities through the local schools and homes in Fairfax County, Va., according to an announcement of Mrs. William J. Cleveland, county WPA case worker.

A special librarian training project has been instituted in five of the high schools with the assignment of a girl to work in each of the libraries under the direction of the principal. This project offers the first opportunity for an organized library program, as the local board authorities have been unable to provide librarians in the county high schools.

Another project which is being started this week is a worker for each high and elementary school to make and serve soup to the pupils. Mrs. Cleveland says those schools desiring assignment of such a worker must make application through the local WPA office. The worker is allowed seven hours a day for a five day week. School and civic organizations will be expected to furnish the necessary supplies for the soup, which may be sold or given free.

Another project which has been approved for the county is three visiting housekeepers to advise and help those in need of assistance in any phase of home management. Each worker will cover two magisterial districts in the county. In addition to sharing the housework the visiting housekeepers will read household items from newspapers and magazines for those unable to read. A magazine library that can be moved from home to home as the need arises will be built up.

Mrs. Cleveland has requested that her office be notified of any persons eligible for assistance under the resettlement program. It is desired that the overflow from relief rolls be turned to this phase of the new relief program, she said.

The Fairfax County resettlement program is under the supervision of Percival Lewis and Mrs. Barbara Bladen and the county committee will be called to pass upon all cases recommended for aid.

Glen Echo Park Site Rezoned To Protect Transit Investment

Montgomery Relief Cost Shows Decline From One Year Ago.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Rezoning of the site of Glen Echo Amuement Park from residential non-conforming to commercial "D" was approved yesterday by the Montgomery County commissioners.

The rezoning was asked in a petition presented by J. H. Hanna as president of the Capital Transit Co., owners of the land. No opposition was offered at a public hearing held Monday at Bethesda County Building.

The amusement park was in existence when the county zoning laws became effective and was permitted to remain as a non-conforming property in a residential area. The company would not be able to rebuild should a fire or other disaster strike the park under the old zoning. The land is owned by the Capital Transit Co. and leased to the Glen Echo Amusement Co.

The commissioners approved sale of bonds totaling $250,000 by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission for extension of water mains and sewerage in the county. They also approved purchase by the commission of $41,000 in municipal bonds for its sinking fund.

A report of the Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, submitted by the clerk, Harry Williams, to the county commissioners, showed that 263 cases had been tried in November and fines and costs assessed in criminal cases amounting to $1,683. Costs collected in civil cases amounted to $71.75 for 37 cases.

The first annual dance and frolic of the Montgomery County Press Association will be held Saturday at Kenwood Country Club from 10 to 1. Stage and screen folk will be present and several radio acts have been promised for the affair. A prominent radio personality expects to be able to act as master of ceremonies.

A program of Christmas carols, including a number of songs of foreign countries, will feature a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Takoma-Silver Spring High School tonight in the school auditorium. The songs will be sung by a group of students from the seventh, eighth and ninth grades called the Youth Singers.

Former Gov. Charles Hillman Brough of Arkansas spoke on "Progressive Principles of the Roosevelt Administration" at an open meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Silver Spring in Jesup Blair Community House. He declared that because of improved conditions Roosevelt's re-election is assured and predicted that former President Hoover or someone he backs will be the Republican candidate. Members of the newly organized Young Women's Democratic Club, of Silver Spring were guests at the meeting.

Erasmus Perry Chapter, D. A. R., will meet tonight at the home of Mrs. Howard Griffith, Silver Spring, Md. Mrs. Henry Waples will speak on her experiences in China.

Relief expenditures of the Montgomery County Welfare Board for needy families during November was only half the total expended in November of last year, Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary of the board, said yesterday. The total spent last month was $7,274.80, she said.

The steady improvement in the county relief situation is further evident in an analysis of the county population published by the board. The analysis reveals that 3.9 per cent of the county population received help from the welfare board last month as compared with 5.9 of the total population one year ago.

The annual banquet of the Rockville Volunteer Fire Department will be held tomorrow at 7 p. m. at the firehouse.

The Woman's Society of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church will meet today at 11 a. m. at the church, Maple and Tulip avenues. Mrs. Dudley C. Jackson, in charge of the program, has arranged a presentation, the theme of which is "Joy to the World."

Officers will be elected by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Takoma Park Lutheran Church, Seventh and Dahlia streets northwest, today at 8 p. m.

Turner, home demonstration agent for Montgomery County, has announced completion of a rose craft demonstration at the home of Mrs. George Mess, Forest Glen, Md., under the direction of Charles A. Stewart of the University of Maryland. Approximately 20 women of the county took part in the demonstration.

The Maryland Fox Hunters Association will meet at the Fairland Riding and Hunt Club Sunday afternoon at 2 p. m., it was announced yesterday by O. W. Anderson, new secretary of the association. Plans for the activities of the association for the new year will be discussed and a program will be outlined for adoption by the members.

Lavinia Engle, former member of the Maryland House of Delegates, will speak on "Welfare Work" at the meeting of the Kensington Parent-Teacher Association which will be held today instead of the fourth Wednesday of the month, which will be Christmas.

Crisis Impends On State Relief, Maryland Told

Administration Reveals a Fund Shortage at Parley in Hyattsville.

Maryland relief funds were described as inadequate by Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator, at a Hyattsville conference yesterday with Prince Georges County officials.

He pictured the outlook, from a financial standpoint, as decidedly grave, but declined to speculate on what would be done to meet the situation.

Withdrawal of Federal funds for direct relief, he said, caused the crisis. He explained only $640,000 was available for this month despite allotments for the first half of December totaling $400,000.

Apprehension was voiced over the fact that the Maryland Legislature could not move to remedy the situation before March 1.

Mrs. J. Enos Ray, Prince Georges County Welfare Board chairman, said 110 families there are dependent on direct relief and about 26 families of 78 additional which have requested help may have to be placed on relief. About $2,000 a month, she added, would be required to care for only 100 families.

Officials present in addition to Greenstein and Mrs. Ray included: State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, Kent R. Mullikin, L. Harold Sothoron, Egbert F. Tingley, Lansdale G. Clagett and John S. White, members of the House of Delegates; Perry Boswell, Vinton D. Cockey, Joseph H. Blandford and Harry W. McNamee, county commissioners, and welfare board members.

Holiday Parties Reserve Places At Night Clubs

Impresarios Promise Big Celebrations for Christmas, New Year's.

By Chanticleer.

Christmas and New Year's already are shaping up in the minds of the impresarios of Washington's after-dark spots. The Russian Troika's urbane George has passed one 1936 resolution . . . the Mayflower Lounge is taking New Year's Eve reservations . . . and the collective mind of the gentry is turned definitely to making the holiday season this winter something to talk about in that long stretch between New Year's and Easter.

The Shoreham, on the other hand, is holding out a bit because of a whopping big show planned for Friday night this week. According to word from the inner sanctum of Big Boss L. Gardner Moore—Rudy Vallee, Gracie Barrie and others of the "Scandals" cast will be on hand for another "Movie Night."

It seems that last Friday night's picture-taking was so successful that another was promptly planned for this week. The winner in the movie star impersonation contest will be announced, too. Eight society lasses participated and probably haven't had a moment free from the jitters since, waiting for the decision.

More pictures will be taken, more impersonations done, and of course, lots of personalities of the theater and radio will be on hand. As usual, the floor show is headed by Janette Hackett.

• • • •

Teddy, who is taking those reservations at the Mayflower's Lounge, really has a good idea. If you make the reservation now, you have a wide choice of position—you know. You can say, "I want this table or that table," and it really makes a lot of difference to some revelers just where they revel. Of course, the Mayflower shyly admits that last year's party was pretty good: two parties of merrymakers were so pleased they left their reservations last New Year's morn for this New Year's Eve!

Mrs. Lucy Kenny won that $50 for a name for the Lafayette's new cocktail room. And the local smart guys should be ashamed of themselves. Mrs. Kenny lives 'way up on Long Island! Her prize-winning name was the "Checker Board Room." Now every guest will get a checkerboard menu, and checkers, too. Menus may be kept by patrons as souvenirs. Also a new "checkerboard cocktail" and entertainment by "The Two Checkers." (It's the only cocktail room in town with checker playing.)

The Baltimore pike's popular Dude Ranch announces that an application has been filed for a liquor permit. As you doubtless know, you take your own firewater with you as matters now stand. Peggy Faye, the "miniature Venus," and Jean Savage, the gal "with the million dollar legs," are headlining the new Dude Ranch floor show. Peggy specializes in rhumbas and boleros; Jean in acrobatics.

Van Smith has a new chore now at Ramon's. The popular singer takes the patron gently by the arm and shows him with pride the new portrait of his piano-playing partner, Rudy Schramm, gracing one of Ramon's murals. Incidentally, Van and Rudy pinch-hitted for a whole floor show at a Kiwanis function the other day until the show arrived a bit tardily.

• • • •

It's a big week for the Lanes at the Madrillon—what with Gwenn Lane demonstrating how tap routines should be turned out most neatly—and Jean Lane singing her way into the customers' favor. Jean, by the way, gets her talent from her dad, who is Al Lenz, of the Beau Brummels. She's a little Brooklyn girl who is making good in a grand way. Anne Gould adds acrobatic dances to the show. And Trumpeter Jack Schaefer sings a couple—shall we say "character" songs.

Phil Lynch draws Jack Brown out of his work at Child's Gingham Club this week, in line with the maestro's policy of featuring the versatility of his band. Jack is trumpeting a very pretty solo as a result. Incidentally, Maestro Lynch is personally supervising the booking of talent for Gingham Club floor shows now.

That fellow Santmyer is playing these evenings out at Wardman Park—in the Dragon Room, the one with the Chinese pagoda bandstand and the open bar. There's no minimum, no cover in the Dragon Room. Don't forget that the Hamilton's Rainbow Room is open at noon, too. Milt Davis and his orchestra are not on hand at 12 noon—but Dick Butler features a buffet luncheon at a modest figure. One of those "eat-as-much-as-you-like" things.

According to our Club Habana spy, Ted Weems has been seen there, with members of his orchestra, these last few days—with a rumor that the entire band is expecting to be on hand tonight. Carroll and Shalita, recently of Broadway's "Smile at Me," are the current floor attraction in some ballroom and tango numbers that have that "just a little different" touch. And, of course, Bert Granoff is on hand to sing your requests.

Gordon St. Chad, who heads the very popular Paradise Islanders at Ambassador's Hi-Hat Room, paradoxically sings bass and plays the smallest uke of the lot. Its the Islanders' fourth engagement at the Hi-Hat—and they are really packing them in. They do say there hasn't been a group of entertainers like them since repeal opened up the country's cocktail centers.

Lew Fink is well into his second week, and a return engagement at that, and shows no signs of letting the customers at La Paree escape without aching ribs from laughing at his antics. With him this week are Maria and Hall, ballroom team; Mozelle, modernistic dancer; Lee Barton, acrobatic star, and the tapping Step Brothers. Emory Daugherty features Marie Fowler and Ray Beck with the band, for dancing.

Platon Dow, who's responsible for the victuals at Matt Windsor's Club Volga Boatman, is an old meany. As the weeks have gone by, the customers have become more and more interested in the shaslick, the borscht and other Russian delicacies and on occasion set out to the kitchen with determination—to learn how Dow puts things together so effectively. But no soap! He remains firm. No secrets of the culinary art from him yet. But he does recommend his special Flaming Beef a la Stroganoff, specially these days.

The Stone Villa has come to the rescue of those who are visiting this famous chicken dinner place for the first time. You see, Stone Villa sets far back from the road and the private lane was proving difficult to find these dark winter nights. But now—ah, there's a string of lights to guide the stranger. Dick Whitsell and his orchestra for dancing nightly.

About that resolution of George's, at the Russian Troika. Its to provide the most rousing New Year's welcome the old town has ever known, a Russian welcome, with a complete new floor show, by "imported" Russian gypsy artists, Russian souvenirs and novelties, a surprise supper as only Chef Alex can prepare surprise suppers—and a generally celebrated occasion. In the meantime, Helen Hamilton, lady of the Troika, is preparing a window display in anticipation of the Christmas season, which will feature a roast pig—and one of those things well worth seeing.

It's the "Parade of the Seasons" at the Lotus this week, a revue with ten lovely maidens, coming to Washington direct from New York. One of the hits is the spectacular costuming depicting the seasons. Al Elmer Norton, master of ceremonies, will make you acquainted with Rita and Remo, former Loew circuit stars, in boleros and jazz fox trots; Estelle Sloane, tap and acrobatic toe routines; Lasco and Floyd, comedy scene, and music by Bill Strickland and his Capitolians.

Planning Body Acts To Acquire New Land

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, anxious to further the development of the District's parks, yesterday filed in the District Supreme Court condemnation proceedings against all owners of properties situated between Thirty-third and Fortieth streets, north of Massachusetts avenue, for the proposed Fort Dupont Park.

Seven blocks of land, comprising some 85 parcels, which are owned by more than 125 persons, were named in the proceedings. The site comprises one of the old Civil War battlegrounds, which the Government is gradually acquiring with a view to "ringing" the city with historic parks.

Probe Opened In Mine Blast; Find 16 Bodies

Victims of Canada Tragedy Brought to Surface by Rescue Crews.

By the Associated Press.

Coalhurst, Alberta, Dec. 10.—The bodies of 16 miners recovered today after an explosion in the Lethbridge Collieries were placed side by side in a temporary morgue while sobbing relatives identified them.

All the men met death when the blast swept a section of the 600-foot level late yesterday. It was the greatest mine disaster in the history of the Lethbridge field, first opened in 1883.

An inquest was ordered by Coroner D. B. Fowler and the Lethbridge Collieries mine, scene of the tragedy, was abandoned, possibly never to reopen. Mine officials began an investigation into the blast, which sent three other men to the hospital. Fourteen miners escaped injury.

Virtually the only means of identifying the bodies were tiny metal disks worn by each man to indicate his check number on the mine's employment list.

All the victims of the explosion were going on duty with the night shift, while three day-shift men were caught by the blast when they were returning to the elevators. They suffered severe burns.

Authorities were uncertain as to the cause of the explosion. They advanced as possibilities that sparks from the telephone circuit may have ignited gas in the mine or that a small cave-in, through spontaneous combustion, caused the damage.

Shoplifting Charge Holds Woman, Son

Detectives Recover Property in Mother's Home.

A woman and her 11-year-old son were arrested for shoplifting yesterday by First Precinct detectives.

Helen E. Walker, 35, of the 2100 block F street northwest, and her son were charged with petit larceny and taking property without right, respectively, on complaints of two downtown department stores.

Detectives J. E. Kane and E. E. Thompson, who made the arrests, said property valued at $43.10 was recovered from the woman's apartment and identified by store officials.

Searchers for Redfern Disappear Into Jungle

Georgetown, British Guiana, Dec. 10 (AP).—The whereabouts of four men seeking Paul Redfern, long-lost aviator, was hidden tonight in the dense jungles of South America.

Unconfirmed reports seeped through to the outside world that the four had abandoned their airplane and started on foot through the wild hinterlands to where Redfern has been rumored held by natives as a "white god."

Manchus Press Chahar Drive; Many Are Slain

Students Boycott Classes, Japan Warns Against New Demonstration.

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Dec. 10.—A Manchukuoan army was reported by Chinese sources tonight to have invaded southeastern Chahar Province and fought a battle with special police in which many persons were killed.

Unable to check the tanks and airplanes which the invaders were said to have used, the defending police withdrew into the city of Kuyuan, the reports from Kalgan stated.

The area was said to be in a virtual state of siege, with the ever-expanding Manchukuoan empire holding a new piece of North China territory. Hostilities were reported to have halted.

Lieut. Col. Tan Takahashi, Japanese military attache at Peiping, was understood to have urged the heads of the Japanese Kwantung army to request Manchukuo to cease the invasion.

In reply to representations made by Chinese authorities here, Takahashi was reported to have stated that the troop movement was due to a faulty distribution of police in the demilitarized zone in North China.

Classes Boycotted.

Students of several North China universities, including the American-supported Yen-Ching and Tsing-Hua institutions, refused to attend classes as a protest against detention of more than a score of students who demonstrated against Japan yesterday.

The Yen-Ching men students substituted military training for their regular class work, while the women students studied nursing and first aid.

Another obstacle to inauguration of a pro-Japanese regime here was removed, however, with the announcement that Nanking probably will accept the resignation of the governor of Hopei, Shang Chen, who vigorously opposed the autonomy movement.

It was understood his troops would be transferred to the west, leaving the army of Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan, military leader of Hopeh and Chahar provinces, in undisputed control of those areas.

A group of autonomists at Tientsin announced a projected settlement of the North China difficulties, which would give great powers to a northern government but would retain Nanking supervision, was inadequate and would be likely to provoke a revival of the autonomy movement.

Nanking Is Warned.

Nanking, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Japanese Embassy verbally warned the Chinese foreign office tonight against any recurrences of anti-Japanese activities such as the demonstration of the 6,000 students yesterday.

A representative of the embassy stressed the danger that such occurrences might spread to other parts of China and provoke possible serious consequences.

Despite the demonstration and the reported Chinese-Manchukuoan hostilities in Chahar, Chinese officials expressed optimism that the planned establishment of a semi-independent political council for Hopeh and Chahar provinces would alleviate northern unrest, at least temporarily.

Diplomatic sources showed less confidence, however, generally professing to believe that the proposed northern settlement would constitute an inevitable source of future trouble.

An official announcement of the Hopeh-Chahar plan was expected to be delayed until this week-end.

Water Under The Bridge.

BROWSE through the files of The Washington Post, one of the great local papers, and nostalgic memories come trooping out from the yellowed pages. Every city has its own Water Under the Bridge recollections.

• • • •

Let's go back to 1910 and find out what topics were occupying The Post 25 years ago this month. On December 1, 1910, New Jersey's governor-elect, Woodrow Wilson, told local newspaper men that "if the people of the United States elect Ohio's Gov. Harmon to the office of President, they will make no mistake." (A few years later Wilson was to tenant the White House during the most trying passages of world history.) On page 1 of the 1910 edition is an item that tickles modern risibilities. Under a Philadelphia dateline appears a dispatch to this effect: A Philadelphia legislator, aroused to fighting pitch, introduced a bill to outlaw the long hatpins which women were wearing. Abe Attell had just beaten Pal Moore at the Fairmont A. C. in New York. (Attell later was to be called in the Black Sox scandal; the Fairmont served as the incubator of Benny Leonard, and Billy Gibson, who operated the club, was to emerge years later as the manager of Gene Tunney.)

• • • •

December, 1910: President Taft insists on economy and threatens to veto all bills that do not emphasize this policy. Charles E. Hughes will undoubtedly be named Chief Justice. (However, Justice Edward Douglas White was named Chief Justice, instead, Taft's advisers arguing that Hughes was too young to hold the post.) In reward for Eddie Collins' brilliant work that won the American League pennant for the Athletics, Connie Mack gave the youngster a three-year contract for the fabulous sum of $6,000 per year (today ball players won't even argue for less than $20,000). In Oklahoma, Col. Cody shot and killed a buffalo on the ranch of Pawnee Bill (today, Buffalo Bill Cody would have to shoot his wife to attract attention). Page 1 of The Post is devoted to a long story on Fritzi Scheff. Her business manager was complaining bitterly that a Washington hotel, at which the prima donna was stopping, would not reserve a special elevator for her private use. He explained that it was very trying to a great artist to ride on a lift with ordinary people. Eva Tanguay has turned authoress, completing a book titled "A Hundred Loves." At Boston, Sam Langford and Joe Jeanette were ready for their ten-rounder (a few days ago, blind Langford was given a city position by Mayor LaGuardia).

• • • •

Twenty-five years ago: Washington style czars held page 1 with this breathless announcement: Hobble skirts, long coats and freakish hats and bonnets are taboo. On the same page is the shocked announcement that one Miss Mae L. Curtis will express the suffrage urge by driving a taxicab on Capital streets. But she will carry only women passengers. At New York City, Big Tim Sullivan starts the six-day bike race at old Madison Square Garden, which Root and Moran won. Secretary Dickinson says the Philippines are not ready for self-government, a cry that re-echoed for a quarter of a century. Senator Aldrich says that the bank laws of the country are defective (he didn't know the half of it). Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, most prominent amateur sculptor in the country, is having a studio built at Wheatley Hills, Long Island (today she's better known for the Gloria Vanderbilt case).

• • • •

Water Under the Bridge: Society leaders are interviewed by The Post reporters on a story breaking from New York. The new Ritz-Carlton Hotel has announced that women will be permitted to smoke in certain parts of the hotel. A District of Columbia judge refused a divorce to a husband who complained that his wife smoked at home. At the National Theater here is the 1910 edition of the Ziegfeld "Follies." Bickel and Watson, Bert Williams, Bobby North, Billie Reeves, William C. Schrode, Lillian Lorrain, Fanny Brice, Shirley Kellogg and Vera Maxwell are listed in the cast. The script is by Harry B. Smith, with Gus Edwards music. The Chase Theater lists its coming attractions: Edgar Allen Woolf's musical comedy, "A Prima Donna's Honeymoon." Added attraction will be Chic Sale's country entertainment. (Today, Chic Sale's short, "Tribute to Lincoln," is playing here.) At the Columbia, May Robson is playing in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," described as "a simple play that refreshes." At the National was Sousa's Band.

• • • •

Washington critics declared Edward Arnold was too young to play a man of 32 in the Ethel Barrymore play, "Mid-Channel," here, but praised youthful Eugene O'Brien's performance. At the Chase, Christy Mathewson, Chief Myers and May Tully were emoting in Bozeman Bulger's baseball classic sketch, "Curves." At Baltimore, the city fathers restrained Mary Garden from doing "Salome," as it would offend public taste in the Maryland city. At New York, a Black Hand gang gave up the fifth child it had kidnaped from wealthy Italian families. (Today, Gov. Hoffman is trying to save Bruno Hauptmann, a move that will make or break him politically.) Water Under the Bridge, a full quarter-century of it, and as you read The Washington Post of 1910 you wonder if the 1935 records will yield as many smiles 25 years from now.

State Completes Case to Abolish Polygamy Cult

Arizona Group Will Plead Religious Grounds for Multiple Wives.

By the Associated Press.

Kingman, Ariz., Dec. 10.—Long, lean I. C. Spencer was portrayed as the husband of two wives and father of 13 children as the State today completed its initial effort to stamp out polygamy in Arizona.

The prosecution rested after calling four witnesses in its effort to convict Spencer, 50-year-old farmer, of "open and notorious cohabitation" with "plural wives."

The witnesses testified polygamy was practiced generally in the primitive little community of Short Creek, where Spencer lives with 200 other men, women and children.

Victor Hayek, attorney for Spencer and two other defendants, indicated religious belief would figure in the defense. His witness list included Bishop J. Y. Barlow, of the Short Creek cult, who contends his followers are "the old Mormons who still believe in plural wives."

Witnesses for the prosecution said Spencer had a legal wife and nine children in Utah but had been living at Short Creek with Sylvia Allred. She has borne Spencer four children and is to become a mother again, they said.

More than 20 years ago, one witness testified, members of the cult attempted to settle at Lees Ferry, where the first Mormon settlers came into Arizona from Utah, but were driven out by authorities. They were forced to seek a still more isolated region, he said.

Charles Heaton, president of the Kanab Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon) testified the church excommunicated 14 Short Creek residents for their belief in polygamy.

County Attorney E. Elmo Bollinger produced through Howard Roarke, relief investigator, affidavits in which Spencer and the woman allegedly admitted the parentage of four children.

Wallace Urges A New Division Of U. S. Wealth

Declares Readjustment Is Necessary to Avert Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace yesterday called for a redistribution of income in the United States, asserting such a realignment was "not a proposal but a necessity."

Calling also for a permanent crop-adjustment program, for a balanced industrial and agricultural production, for a lowering of tariff barriers and an increased foreign trade, Wallace said while discussing this latter question in his annual report:

"Here, then, is what we must recognize: The redistribution of income is not a proposal but a necessity. In one way or another it results automatically from any of the courses open to us. We cannot avoid it by ceasing to produce for export and by limiting our imports to necessities. That is to cripple agriculture, to make permanent the necessity for costly farm relief, to compel disadvantageous urban adjustments, and to create scarcity.

Suggests Methods.

"The resulting unemployment involves heavy public expenditures. In such circumstances, we first reduce the national income and then redistribute the reduced total to avert disaster."

The other course open, Wallace said, "involves a redistribution of income likewise, but under happier conditions."

"With production stimulated through international trade," he said, "the total national income would increase, and, though the increase would have to be distributed so as to increase consumption per capita, the operation would raise the national standard of living. By this means we would be balancing the national consumption with the national production or its equivalent—and on a rising scale."

Agriculture, the Secretary said, will not monopolize the benefit of a more liberal import policy, "even in the earlier stages."

"If we admit foreign goods into the United States," he continued, "it will provide dollar exchange that other countries can spend."

Defends Farm Imports.

Defending the Administration against criticism of farm imports during the past year, Wallace blamed the drought, but said, "the farm imports now entering the United States are only a trickle, and there is no chance that they can become a flood." The Secretary asserted then that all imports came in over the regular tariff wall.

It is "certainly possible," Wallace said, to exclude foreign commodities from the domestic market, "but the action will tend at the same time to keep within the country products that should go out . . . Practically, the question to be decided is whether a small gain in the home market is worth substantial export market. Wallace said, declined from 84,000,000 acres in the fiscal year 1921 to 39,000,000 acres in the fiscal year 1934.

"To keep this acreage out of production indefinitely," he asserted, "is defeatism."

'Mercy Killing' Drive Started By Londoners

would come to be regardsd as commendable."

The titled and dignified surgeon, an honorary fellow of the American Surgical Association, is president of the new "easy death" society.

Dr. C. Killick Millard, president of the Society of Medical Officers of Health, said he had received many letters from United States doctors applauding the movement. One letter said a similar bill would be introduced in the Mississippi Legislature in January.

Since announcement a month ago of the plan to ask Parliament for a euthanasia act and several anonymous admissions of "mercy killings," a rapidly-spreading controversy has broken out among religious leaders and within the ranks of the medical profession.

Most of the militant opposition to euthanasia has come from persons basing their protest upon religious teachings—"Thou shalt not kill."

The Euthanasia Society tonight announced that it has obtanied a statement signed by 14 prominent religious leaders, headed by Dr. W. R. Inge, the "Gloomy Dean" of St. Paul's, upholding the Christian ethics of the plan.

"As regards the ethical issue, we, the undersigned, after giving the matter careful consideration, wish to state that in our opinion voluntary euthanasia should not be regarded as contrary to the teachings of Christ or the principles of Christianity," the statement said.

A number of the religious leaders, including Dean R. W. Matthews of St. Paul's, Canon Peter Green of Manchester and Canon R. H. L. (Dick) Sheppard, former Dean of Canterbury, attended the meeting at the British Medical Association hall.

The plan of "easy death" was outlined by Dr. Millard.

Any person put to death by a "mercy killing" would have to be 21 years of age or over and be suffering from a disease involving severe pain and of an incurable character.

The victim would make a written application, signed by two witnesses, and would have the consent of his near relatives.

A euthanasia "referee" appointed by the minister of health would interview the patient and make a ruling after seven days and another three days would elapse to permit an appeal by any relative.

In addition the attending physician, an official witness, would witness all deaths.

"The minister of health would prescribe the methods of death," Dr. Millard said. "Suffice it to say that science is quite able to devise methods which would be simple, painless, quick and certain.

"Most people, I gather, would prefer to be first put to sleep and for actual death to take place afterward."

Business Urged To Press War On New Deal

American Form of Government at Stake, Says Steel Executive.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Ernest T. Weir, of Pittsburgh, chairman of the board and chief executive of the National Steel Corporation and the Weirton Steel Co., called upon business tonight to employ its heaviest artillery against what he termed the New Deal's "desire to take away our traditional form of government."

"Business has not been fighting the New Deal Administration," Weir said in an address before the Illinois Manufacturers' Association. "And this is where business makes a mistake. Certain sections of business have waged fights against certain actions of the Administration. But so far, business in general has not even seemed to recognize the real things against which it should fight.

"The real antagonist is the basic motive of this Administration—the desire to take away our traditional form of government, the desire to substitute a government by the self-appointed or politically appointed elite.

"Business should fight this with every weapon at its command, because it will be doing it not so much for business as for the permanent welfare of the United States."

Liberty League Heads to Hold Joint Session

The national executive committee and the national advisory council of the American Liberty League will hold a joint session here January 25, to plan its activities for next year, it was announced yesterday.

Significance is attached to the announcement because the projected meeting will follow shortly after the meeting of the Democratic national committee and that party's nation-wide Jackson Day rally, when the President will open his formal campaign for re-election.

The Liberty League session will end with a public dinner, at which speakers, presumably, will denounce the President, the New Deal and most, if not all, of their works. Part of these speeches will be broadcast nationally. The names of "speakers of national prominence" will be announced later.

The meeting of the league's executive committee and its advisory council, as well as a simultaneous meeting of its national lawyers' committee, will be closed to the public. This will be the second conclave of the directing divisions of the Liberty League. The first was in Chicago last June.

Masons Elect Officers.

The Anchor Club of Master Masons of the Department of Commerce last night at a dinner at Schneider's Restaurant elected the following officers: Malcolm Kerlin, president; Clarence C. Weidemann, vice president; John S. Collins, secretary; Royal G. Best, treasurer, and Albert D. Davis, sentinal.

End Testimony For 2 Charged With Tax Fraud

Trial of 3 in Conspiracy Case May Be Over Late Today.

Trial of John W. Hardgrove, Henning R. Nelson and Frank B. McElhill in the District Supreme Court on a charge of conspiring to defraud the Government, may end today, it was indicated yesterday, when the first two completed their testimony, in connection with a special assessment on the 1932 income tax of Thomas N. MacCarter.

Only McElhill, who may be kept off the stand, his attorneys indicated, remains to be heard. In the event he is not called, the case will be presented to the jury in the late afternoon.

Both Hardgrove and Nelson stoutly denied yesterday they had conspired with any one to "fix" McCarter's income tax. Hardgrove, first to be called to the stand as a defense witness, professed a complete ignorance of the case. He declared his personal knowledge of the McCarter case was only what he learned from official records of the Treasury Department, of which he and Nelson were officials.

McCarter has said that the trio acted to get not less than $10,000 from him for acting in his behalf in appealing the extra assessment.

The assessment, he said, involved a dispute between him and the Treasury as to whether or not a payment he made to his son was a gift, or a liquidation of a "bad debt." The latter is allowed as an offset in income tax matters.

Defense attorneys indicated last night they would press to the utmost their defense that the trio was "entrapped." They claimed none of the alleged 21 overt acts cited in the indictment occurred until after McCarter, a New Jersey utilities tycoon, had informed Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that his suspicions were aroused. As a result, the Treasury official assigned a score of special agents to the case.

McCarter said he never had an illegal proposal from any of the defendants. He also stated he acted in concert with the special agents of the Treasury, and did only what he was called upon to do. Every instance of "wire tapping" and spying, he said, was done at the insistence of the Government agents. They were anxious, he said, to "nail down" the case against Hardgrove, Nelson and McElhill.

A fourth defendant, Richard J. Callaghan, a member of McElhill's New York City income tax firm, was indicted, but he was cleared when charges against him were dropped by the district attorney several weeks ago.

Set of Creams Is Inexpensive Idea for Gift

It Contains All-Purpose and Tissue Preparation for Dry Skins.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

You would be surprised at the number of calls that come into this column from women who ask us to suggest something inexpensive and different for a Christmas gift.

Inexpensive—and different. That's not an easy order. Finally, however, we thought of one item that fills the bill perfectly. Its an attractive set of creams that are fit for a queen. One of them is a magnolia-scented, all-purpose cream. After you've cleansed your face with it, you can rest assured there's not an iota of dirt left on your skin. The other is a tissue cream, an especially rich preparation which does miraculous things to dry and withered skins.

If you bought these two little beautifiers separately, you'd pay the grand total of $1.75, but buying them together in this attractive set they cost only $1.

The way they're packaged will take your fancy immediately. They come in a snowy white box with a bright red bottom. The whole whole thing is tied with gay Christmas ribbon.

Say what you will, but such a gift will be bound to delight a friend. It has the happy faculty of being different. Furthermore, it's inexpensive. And to top it all, it's frightfully useful.

The Inexpensive Gift.

Somewhere on every woman's gift list are two or three names not close enough to her heart to merit costly tokens on Christmas morning—yet far too important for only a card.

For these "problem children" a certain cosmetician has devised a gay solution. An ivory and black automatic lipstick and a miniature mascara case complete with brush and all and looking so like the lipstick it might be its twin.

The two come in every conceivable shade to enhance the eyes and mouth and are surprisingly inexpensive for such gay fillips.

Inclusive Cocktail Sets.

IT'S A GOOD BET that at least a dozen of your friends would rejoice wholeheartedly if you were to present them with that very inclusive cocktail set shown in a downtown store.

It includes a bottle of orange bitters, cherries, cocktail bitters, Spanish olives, rock candy sirup, grenadine, orange juice and lemon juice. Also there is a mixing spoon, corkscrew and bottle opener. In fact, everything but the kitchen stove.

The price is $1.59.

Garden in Glass Bowl.

WINTER has put a definite end to our outside gardening efforts, so we turn in desperation to the small inside gardens we can watch over and urge to grow. More fun than almost any other kind is the winter garden that comes in a large glass bowl. You sprinkle a little water over the plants (they're all wood plants, by the way) and then put on the top.

The moisture collects on the inside and drops back on the plants very much as rains does.

Day by day the tiny shrubs fill out and grow taller. Soon your bowl is a mass of growing things, a small jungle in itself.

Shaving Soap for Dad.

ALONG with the tie and socks you are going to put on the Christmas tree for dad, why not treat him to a real luxury with some of the la-de-la shaving soap which comes in a fascinating round wooden box?

Its appearance is smart, and the host of gentlemen who use it say it lathers like nobody's business.

Trains Public Leaders.

DR. KATHERINE BLUNT.

College Move Puts Emphasis On Public Life

Leaders of Connecticut Institution Back Wider Role for Graduates.

"CAN ANYTHING be done about it?" is the question arising from the obvious fact that graduates of women's colleges generally do not take an active and competent part in public affairs.

The answer is "Yes," according to leaders at the Connecticut College, at New London, Conn. Dr. Katharine Blunt, the president, further explains, "If the college has a central interest or purpose it is educating young women to be better citizens, to take an active interest in community affairs as well as in their homes. We believe college can give such training."

"Just how?" is another question to which Dr. Blunt and her associates have found an answer. "College need not urge direct running for office," says Dr. Blunt, "but it should interest its students in the effective work of such an organization as the League of Women Voters. Well-trained graduates going as volunteers or paid workers into that group can find a worthy outlet for their energy, a channel of endeavor that would benefit others as well as themselves.

Pre-Professional Course.

"Definite training in college also can well be given for participation in community projects after college through a pre-profesisonal course, training future workers for the League of Women Voters."

Has anything been done about this so far? Again from Connecticut College comes the answer, "Yes—although only a start has been made."

The first step was an invitation last spring from Connecticut College to 15 neighboring institutions to send representatives to discuss the problem. In order to glean ideas from persons outside the academic circle, many persons active and prominent in public affairs were asked to take part in the conference. Among outstanding persons participating were Dr. Kathryn McHale, of Washington, general director of the American Association of University Women; Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, one of the trustees of Connecticut College; Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard College; Judge Florence Allen of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Curriculum Expanded.

As a result of the conference, Connecticut College has already expanded its curriculum to set in motion some of the plans that grew out of the meeting. For more extensive training in the theory of participation in public life, the departments of political and social science employed new instructors—Dr. Marjorie Ruth Dilley and Miss Florence Harrison. Dr. Dilley is now teaching two courses on the trend of interest in public affairs. One covers governmental systems of today; the other, the history and operation of political parties in the United States. Miss Harrison, formerly a field secretary for the League of Women Voters, conducts a group working on practical problems of citizenship, including such subjects as "how to vote," "how to conduct campaigns," and "how to improve the efficiency of town, city, State and Federal governments."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Three months ago my lovely home with all its furnishings was sold at auction. All I have left is a trust fund to be used solely for the purpose of educating my children. I would not have it otherwise. They are away at school; my daughter in boarding school; my son in military school. I am living with my parents, who have a big house and sufficient income to keep them fairly comfortable. The household consists of my parents, a middle-aged maiden aunt, who looks after my invalid mother, and myself.

My duty is to keep the house spotless and do the washing and ironing for the family, which I am entirely willing to do. But there is an unpleasant fact to be stated which takes all the joy out of my life. My parents remind me almost every hour of the day (this is no exaggeration) of my dependence. All the lovely friends with whom I used to spend such happy hours are refused admittance to the house. When some of them have ventured to call, they were promptly told to get out and stay out. I don't believe any human being could tolerate such episodes long without having his spirit completely broken. I must confess mine is already badly bent.

I have made considerable effort to acquire at least a minimum of independence. For the past three months I have walked the streets looking for work, hoping against hope each day would bring some opportunity for earning a livelihood. But those who have jobs in my home city value them highly and stick to them. Truly, jobs are scarce.

What I am asking of you, Miss Haworth, is to please, please advise me how to go about getting a job in Washington. As I have already said, I have no money, and consequently cannot afford to come there to stay while looking for work. But isn't there some way I could get a job through correspondence, furnishing references, of course. In my more prosperous days I had a number of friends in your city, but since financial reverses have overtaken me in such a big way, I no longer receive urgent invitations to spend weekends with them. My shabby clothes and rough hands would be out of place at their bridge tables, and my one remaining cocktail gown is hopelessly out of date.

I am 35 years of age; graduated from high school 18 years ago; have several years' experience in office work, am a proficient stenographer and can keep small sets of books. I can operate the dictaphone and mimeograph machine and the PBX board. I am an efficient housekeeper and would gladly accept such a situation in a widower's home, even though there were chidren.

I shall appreciate, oh, so much, any suggestions you may make which will help me secure any sort of job. I realize I can not afford to be "choosey" in the matter. Sincerely yours, VIRGINIAN.

No "Open Sesame."

DEAR VIRGINIAN: I know of no formula which might work as an "open sesame" to a job in Washington, particularly for a person who is not on the immediate scene. About the most I can do is print your letter and trust it will be read by someone who will be sufficiently touched by your awkward (but after all not-so-serious) predicament and sufficiently impressed by your qualifications to offer you a chance to prove yourself.

One can't help wondering how your middle-aged maiden aunt has managed to adjust herself to an environment you find so intolerable. Are you making the necessary effort to fit yourself with a minimum of friction into your parents' household? In the days of your former prosperity and greater independence of action, it's possible you defied and so far departed from their ideals and standards that now they are militantly on guard against the possibility of such conduct being repeated under their very roof. In self-protection they may feel it necessary to discipline you with a constant reminder of your dependence much as they might have disciplined you with the back of a hairbrush in your preteen years.

They may believe you have long been the weak tool of wrong associates; their disapproval of your so-called friends may be deep, bitter and in some measure justified. Perhaps they believe your present state of dependence is largely a matter of your own and your friends' doing and not at all the unfortunate consequence of a chain of uncontrollable circumstances. In driving your friends away from their door, they may be using the only means they know for ending the latter's non-constructive if not actually destructive influence over you, hoping that at last you may learn to adjust yourself to a common-sense, down-to-earth way of living.

• • • •

If this hypothesis is sound, you can change the face of your situation somewhat by so conducting yourself that your parents will decide you are a blessing rather than a dubious social burden. I note your "duty," as you call it, has been rather clearly defined: you are to keep the house spotless and do the laundry work, in exchange for maintenance, which I suppose includes room, board and clothing. Would it be possible to do a little more than your "duty," thus described? Could you not take the initiative in devising ways and means of making both your parents more comfortable and happy? Perhaps you could care for your invalid mother for a while, and give your aunt a short holiday. If you were patient, tender and capable in caring for your mother, you might eventually break through the shell of her inimical reserve and find in her your most consoling champion and friend.

• • • •

It is very evident you do not appreciate how fortunate you really are, at 35, to have a trust fund with which to educate your children; to have two parents on whom to lean. For you say, ". . . all I have left is a trust fund . . . I am living with my parents who have a big house . . . but there is an unpleasant fact . . . " Whatever the circumstances of any life, there are always one or more unpleasant facts to be faced, or hadn't you learned that? And it depends almost altogether on how we adjust ourselves to those facts whether they increase or diminish in number and importance.

• • • •

I realize your position is acutely uncomfortable and that the logical solution of it is to find a job which will make you economically self-sufficient. But I believe the present situation affords needed opportunity for developing the stamina and resourcefulness you must have if you hope to find and to hold a job in the outside world. Pretty pouting will never do it. M. H.

Peace Petition Of 50,000,000 Is Pushed Here

Miss Vernon and Aids Are Collecting Lists to Give World Rulers.

By Malvina Lindsay.

BACK in the days when Mabel Vernon was campaigning for woman suffrage, she had the habit of bearding the most violent male antisuffragists in their dens and sweetly and naively presenting them with long lists of names petitioning the ballot for her sex.

Now, in a room in the Willard Hotel, Miss Vernon and her aids are assembling other long lists of names—their goal is at least 50,000,000—which they expect to present sweetly and naively in the spring to Hitler, Mussolini, the Japanese Emperor and all other rulers petitioning them to end war.

Recently returned from Geneva, Miss Vernon, campaign director of the People's Mandate to Governments to End War, reports that this peace offensive, begun only about three months ago, is steadily gaining ground in Europe and is now being extended to the Orient. She is even hopeful that 100,000,000 names may be obtained by spring.

Despite war rumblings throughout the world and the apparently hopeless international peace outlook, women leaders in Europe, according to Miss Vernon, are quietly going ahead assembling the gigantic peace ballot. The mandate drive is under way in every country except Italy. While nothing is being done officially in Germany, yet a German branch outside the German boundaries is seeing that the mandate petitions are being circulated.

Regarded as Last Resort.

"It is a sort of last hope to the women of Europe," says Miss Vernon. "Everywhere these women are gripped by the paralyzing fear of inevitable war. Perhaps not today, perhaps not tomorrow, but some day it must come, they feel. On every side one encounters the feeling, 'God help us, we never want another war.'"

The petition plan, Miss Vernon feels, is the only way left for the people of the world to do something about stopping war. She quotes a recent statement of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, veteran suffrage leader, to the effect that "suffrage was largely won by the use of petitions, and petitions will help world peace." She also cites the effectiveness of the British peace poll of last summer in which 12,000,000 people voted and in which the overwhelming sentiment supporting disarmament and the League of Nations had a decided influence upon government policy.

Since the mandate campaign started September 6—the birthday of Jane Addams—the headquarters here has sent out on request through the United States petitions for for abuot 5,000,000 names. About 100,000 names are already on file. These are mostly from scattered volunteer petitions.

Many noted persons are circulating petitions. One signed by 157 names and headed by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, jr., has recently been received. Among the distinguished signers have been Dr. Florence R. Sabin, Sherwood Anderson, Pearl Buck, Clarence Darrow, Dr. John Dewey, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Zona Gale, Dr. Alice Hamilton, Fannie Hurst, Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, Sen. Gerald Nye, Gov. Floyd G. Olson, Margaret Sanger, Oswald Garrison Villard, Lillian D. Wald, William Allen White, Dr. Mary E. Woolley. The screen is represented by Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone, the stage by Sidney Howard, Helen Hayes, Elmer Rice and others.

European Base in Paris.

European headquarters of the mandate campaign have been established in Paris with Camille Drevet, noted French feminist, as organizing secretary. Mme. Drevet is the widow of a French army officer killed in the World War. Since her husband's death she has devoted her life to furthering peace. Several years ago she was in Washington.

When the petitions are completed next spring the International League for Peace and Freedom, which is sponsoring the mandate, will send a deputation of noted men and women with the peace ballots to all the governments of the world.

"We hope to show all rulers," says Miss Vernon, "that it is the irresistible will of the people of the world that they do not get into a fight."

The mandate requests that governments stop increase of armaments and armed forces; use existing machinery for settlement of present conflicts; secure a world treaty for immediate reduction of arms; secure international agreements founded on recognition of world interdependence to end the economic anarchy which breeds war.

Miss Vernon admits that the peace mandate undertaking is audacious in its magnitude.

"Nobody but women would attempt this, I have been told," she says. "Well, that may be true. Only women attempt the impossible. What if this thing never has been done? That is no proof it can't be. It just must be. There is no other alternative."

Peace Votes Are Assembled

Skin Is Frozen To Effect Cure Of Ground Itch

Creeping Eruption Gets Its Name From Track Made by Parasites.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A TYPE of stubborn skin disease that is sometimes difficult to diagnose and remedy is known as creeping eruption or ground itch. It is quite prevalent in the South Atlantic States, although it is not unknown in the North. Its full extent in the United States has never been traced and it is probably more widely distributed than is generally presumed.

The eruption is caused by the larva (measuring 1-1,000th of an inch in diameter and 1-50th of an inch in length) of a parasite known as the Brazilian hookworm. It is not thought that human beings harbor this parasite in the intestinal tract, but it does exist in cats and dogs, and their intestines serve as breeding grounds. The larva will travel from place to place in running water, particularly surface water. The water of streams and the shores of ponds and lakes may be infected. Cases have been reported in which children have acquired the infection from handling sand in play boxes.

The larva burrows beneath the outer layers of the skin, giving an appearance similar to a mole track across a lawn. The steady progression of the track gives the disease its name—creeping eruption. The parasite never travels in straight lines, but forms a tortuous, raised eruption that may assume almost any shape. When it first gains access to the skin tiny, raised, reddened, itchy areas will result. Because they are so similar in appearance to other innocent lesions little attention is paid to them. Once the worm has become well established, however, it will start to migrate. It is at this time that the true character of the disease may be recognized.

J. L. Kirby-Smith, who reports on an extended experience with approximately 5,000 cases of creeping eruption, believes that a simple plan of treatment is after all the best. The method was first proposed by J. B. Shelmire, of Dallas, Tex., and consists in freezing the skin lesion through the application of an ethyl chloride spray. This drug evaporates so rapidly that intense cold is produced.

Rennet Powder Desserts Save Kitchen Work

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE WOMAN who has school children coming home at noon each day for luncheon will find it a good idea to have in her kitchen file of recipes a number of quickly prepared, nutritious desserts.

Children more than adults feel that a meal is not complete without dessert. It is difficult to plan outside activitites if all your recipes are complicated and take a great deal of time in the kitchen.

When you are contemplating simple luncheon desserts remember the many possibilities afforded by the flavored rennet powders. These desserts which are especially nutritious because of their milk content can be prepared in less time than a baked custard or pudding. The recipe for the luncheon dessert suggested in today's menu is prepared with rennet powder. The recipe follows.

Orange Fig Surprise.

1 package orange rennet custard powder
1 pint milk
4 fig newtons

First break fig newtons into small pieces and place in the bottom of the dessert dishes. Then dissolve rennet powder in lurkewarm milk, and pour immediately over the fig newtons. Do not disturb until firm—about 10 minutes. Chill in refrigerator.

You will find that success in making these rennet powder desserts depends upon the correct temperature of the milk and the fact that the mixture must not be disturbed until after it has set.

Linen Bindings For Children's Books Advised

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

IN CHOOSING books for tiny children the most important factors to be considered are their lasting qualities and their illustrations. They should be made of linen or heavy cardboard so they will withstand wear.

The child who finds early the pleasure of tearing books cannot easily be taught proper respect for books. A book once torn should be taken from the child and repaired if possible, or if repair is out of the question, thrown away. For one tear in a book almost invariably leads to another.

The illustrations should be good, from an artistic standpoint, for they may be the child's first training in beauty. The simpler they are, the better. Much of the beautiful detail work in the illustrations of modern children's books is wasted for the purpose—it makes far more appeal to the adult than to the child. The child does not see the fine touches, but looks for the broad outline and the story which it tells.

The grotesque, the crude and the ugly are out of place in children's books. There should be bright colors, but not rude and glaring contrasts. Modernism and satirical caricature are for grown-ups, not for the very young. Art is as surely the result of a slow development of the race as music or literature, and to give the child the self-conscious present-day attempt at the primitive does not make sense. He is still in the real primitive stage and can do his own creation along those lines.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WE'VE spent a gloomy week thinking of all the time we used to waste basting in box pleats for chair or bedspread flounces. Because we have just discovered the most delicious shortcut for the job . . . maybe you've been smart enough to think of it long ago. Press the pleats in! You cut a pasteboard card the width of each pleat and measure as you go along, set the pleat and press it down without basting . . . it saves hours and hours.

On the strength of that we are on a pleating jag and suggest yards of it for a bedroom a lady is puzzled about. The walls of the room are white and the furniture mahogany of colonial design. She has two rugs just alike, floral hooks, one of them 5x7, the other smaller to go beside the bed. They have a jade green border with multicolored flowers in the centers. The question in her mind was what to do about the windows, the bedspread and the dressing table skirt. We prescribed chintz with a white ground and an old timey flower bouquet design . . . to be used for spread, valance and dressing table skirt. Make a box pleated flounce for the spread, a box pleated valance for the windows and a box pleated skirt for the dressing table skirt. Finish all these box pleatings at the top with a scalloped band of plain jade green chintz . . . this band at the top of the flounces should be about 4 or 5 inches deep and should be lined to give it body. Have frilly white tie back curtains of net, dotted swiss or embroidered organdy.

Hoeppel Said Ives 'Is Crazy,' Burke Asserts

Made Reply to Questions on Story of Bribe, Says Californian.

"The boy is crazy."

This, it was testified in District Supreme Court yesterday, was Representative John H. Hoeppel's reason for canceling the West Point appointment of young James W. Ives, one-time Olympic athlete.

Representative Hoeppel (Democrat), California, and his son, Charles J. Hoeppel, faced the second day of their trial on charges of conspiracy to sell Ives an appointment to the Military Academy for $1,000.

Mrs. Nell C. Redmond, secretary to former Representative John H. Burke, of California, took the witness stand to tell of Representative Hoeppel's visit to her office soon after Ives received his appointment.

At that time, she said, Hoeppel brought with him a cancellation of the appointment. She questioned his action, Mrs. Redmond declared, because Ives had passed the entrance examination and appeared eager to start his studies.

It was then, she testified, that Representative Hoeppel told her that young Ives was "crazy."

Trinastich Called.

A few minutes before Mrs. Redmond took the stand, George W. Trinastich, George Washington University football player and a prosecution "mystery" witness, was called to testify.

His testimony, however, was halted soon after he was seated. Trinastich became an important figure in the case Monday when he was identified by Ives as a man who approached him recently in an attempt to stop prosecution of Representative Hoeppel.

Hardly had Trinastich started to relate a conversation he had with Reresentative Hoeppel in a Connecticut avenue sandwich shop last June, when defense counsel protested vigorously. A hurried conference at the bench of Justice Daniel O'Donoghue followed. Trinastich was then excused until later in the trial.

Representative Burke had signed Ives' appointment to West Point in a "trade" with Representative Hoeppel, Mrs. Redmond admitted. In return for the Military Academy appointment, it was testified, Hoeppel was to appoint a man to Annapolis for Representative Burke.

This type of "trading" among members of Congress is "nothing unusual," declared former Representative Burke, called from his home in Long Beach, Calif., to testify at the Hoeppels' trial.

He said that, during his brief experience in Congress, he found that "trades" were practiced frequently.

Burke said that he was only keeping his end of an agreement with Representative Hoeppel when he signed Ives' appointment to West Point. He said the appointment was really controlled by Reprresentative Hoeppel. Then he related a conversation he had with Mrs. Redmond:

Ives, Mrs. Redmond told him, came to the office and reported that the West Point appointment had been promised—providing he paid $1,000.

Called Hoeppel.

Burke said he called Hoeppel on the telephone and told him what Ives had said. He quoted Hoeppel as saying:

"Oh, don't pay any attention to him (Ives), he is crazy."

It was some time later when Representative Hoeppel came to Burke's office with the appointment cancellation and repeated the "crazy" accusation.

Burke caused laughter when he said he quit Congress of his own accord and "never wanted to go back."

Young Ives had previously testified that he went to Burke's office and then later to Representative Hoeppel's. On advice from friends that the appointment transaction was illegal, Ives said he told Hoeppel he wanted to resign and asked if he couldn't receive the appointment legally.

"As long as you don't wish to carry out the agreement, you can't have the appointment," Ives quoted the Representative as saying.

In earlier testimony, Ives identified the younger Hoeppel as the man to whom he gave a promissory note for $1,000 to clinch the appointment.

Hiram Dudley Ives, brother of James, testified that he was introdueed to Representative Hoeppel's son as "Charles Alexander." He stepped from the witness stand to touch young Hoeppel on the shoulder. As "Alexander," the brother declared, young Hoeppel came to Baltimore with James. The three met in the Ives home.

There, it was testified, the younger Hoeppel told of having failed on his entrance examination to West Point and that the appointment was still open.

"I can give the appointment to anyone I care to," young Hoeppel was quoted as saying. "But I have been under heavy expense and I feel that it is worth at least $1,000."

Col. Raymond S. Bamberger, U. S. A., attached to the adjutant genral's office in 1934 (when the alleged appointment transaction took place), said that he met Ives in the office of Brig Gen. Edgar T. Connelly, assistant to the adjutant general.

He (Col. Bamberger) referred Ives to Representative Hoeppel after learning that a West Point appointment was open in the latter's district. In a letter of introduction to Representative Hoeppel, Col. Bamberger added a notation:

"This is the young man in whom Gen. Connelly is interested."

Gen. Connelly, however, took the stand to testify that he had "no interest in the young man whatsoever." He said that Ives came to his office seeking advice on a possible appointment and that he referred him to Col. Bamberger.

The trial will resume this morning with additional prosecution witnesses.

U. S. Agency Hits Report On Boundary

Virginia, Alexandria and Arlington Held Real Losers in Decision.

Dumps, Billsboards on Mt. Vernon Highway Are Forecast.

The State of Virginia, Arlington County and the City of Alexandria will be the ultimate losers, rather than the victors, if the recent report of the Virginia-D. C. Boundary Commission is made law, according to a statement released yesterday by a Government agency directly concerned with the controversy.

The report of the commission was filed with Gov. Peery, of Virginia, at Richmond yesterday, by William C. Gloth, of Arlington County, who represented Virginia on the commission.

Requesting anonymity, the agency in its announcement envisaged the establishment of unsightly dumps and billboards along the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway if Congress and the Virginia Legislature ratify the low water mark, headland-to-headland decision reached by the commission.

Added Expense.

Exploitation of the Virginia shore by private individuals, presenting a serious problem to State authorities, also looms as a result of the commission's recommendations.

"To cope with the tendency toward such conditions," the statement said, "it will add materially to the present expenditures of the governing bodies named (Virginia, Arlington and Alexandria), while the check which is threatened to the consistent development and improvement of the Virginia shore will have a decided effect of lowering land values and conditions of living, which would be materially improved by the completion of present plans."

Acceptance of the report, hailed as "fair and proper" Monday by Representative Howard W. Smith, in whose district the disputed area is located, would compel Virginia to establish a river patrol if it hopes to conserve fishing resources in the Potomac.

Still another responsibility would be maintenance of a patrol to guard against pollution, a task now assumed by the District government, which also protects the river's abundant shad and herring in nearby waters.

Private Exploitation.

"The most serious matter, however, is the private exploitation of the facilities and improvements which have been provided at public expense. The bird sanctuary in Roaches Run and the area west of the Mount Vernon boulevard in Four-Mile Run are glaring examples. One of these has already been developed into an adjunct of the Virginia-District of Columbia improvement system.

"Under the headland-to-headland theory, these areas become dedicated to dumps for private profit and to the ultimate erection of structures for purposes which will best serve the immediate profit of private persons. The effect of such use on the enjoyment of the thousands who will use the Mount Vernon Boulevard will have to be considered by the Virginia governmental authorities, on whom the pressure of public opinion may eventually force the acquisition of such properties at a very large cost."

Under Supreme Court decision in past years which have affirmed the high-water mark boundary line, the Federal Government has changed a "miasmatic, swampy delta between Rock Creek and the eastern branch into one of the most satisfactory river conditions in the world," it is pointed out.

"If the contentions of private individuals are upheld, improvements to which they have not contributed and to which they will not and can not contribute will, without the slightest trouble on their part, bring to them large sums of money for the sale of land which will appear only temporarily in the tax returns, since it must eventually be acquired for public purposes, either in connection with the river improvement or with boulevard protection."

Dentists Asked To Chart Teeth And Aid Police

Justice Agent Says Such Record Often Is Only Clew to Identity.

W. H. Drane Lester, a Department of Justice agent, last night urged members of the District Dental Society to "make permanent records of patients' teeth."

Lester, an inspector of the Bureau of Investigation, said that because of the indestructibility of teeth they were often the only means of identifying mutilated or burned bodies.

An increasing popularity of dentition records was noted by Lester. He said that all Navy men must have their teeth charted for identification purposes.

"As soon as dentists find a standardized system of recording the minute characteristics of the teeth," he said, "it will be possible for police to use this system along with fingerprints, making it harder for criminals to hide their identity."

Criminals who have their faces lifted and their fingerprints mutilated can be identified by dentists who have worked on their mouths, Lester said.

Capts. Stevens, Anderson to Get Hubbard Medal

Geographic Society Will Honor Stratosphere Fliers Here Tonight.

The Hubbard gold medal, reserved for the greatest of explorers by the National Geographic Society, will be presented to the stratosphere fliers, Capt. Albert W. Stevens and Capt. Orvil A. Anderson, in Constitution Hall at 8:15 p. m. today.

On Armistice Day, these two Army officers, riding Explorer II, the largest balloon ever constructed, soared farther from the earth than man ever had before—72,395 feet, nearly 14 miles.

The flight was sponsored by the National Geographic Society and the U. S. Army, and the data obtained in the lofty sky frontier is expected to prove of tremendous scientific importance.

Pershing to Make Gift.

The Hubbard medals will be presented to Capt. Stevens and Capt. Anderson tonight by Gen. John J. Pershing.

Thereafter the two officers, together with Capt. Randolph P. Williams, who was the ground officer of the expedition near Rapid City, S. Dak., will describe their experiences and show motion pictures and lantern slides of the flight.

The Hubbard Medal, first designed as an award to Admiral Peary after his discovery of the North Pole, was struck off in honor of Gardiner Greene Hubbard, a founder of the National Geographic Society.

Ten Others Honored.

Ten persons, including Admiral Peary, have been awarded the medal. Among the others were Amundsen, for his discovery of the South Pole; Capt. Bob Bartlett, for his important northern explorations; Dr. Eckener, for his round-the-world trip in the Graf Zeppelin; Roy Chapman Andrews, for his explorations in the Gobi Desert; Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, for his flight from New York to Paris; Mrs. Lindbergh, for her navigational work on extended flights with her husband, and Admiral Byrd, for his flight over the North Pole.

Attack Made Upon Foxall Bus Service

Citizens Group Demands Public Ownership or Competition.

Complaints on Transit Lines to Be Given Hearing Monday.

Government ownership of the Capital Transit Co. or Government competition with the company was urged last night in the report of the public utilities committee of the Foxhall Community Association presented by Edwin C. Reed, committee chairman.

In denouncing the bus service, Reed submitted a list of complaints in which he charged poorly-operated and decrepit buses, bad ventilation and independable service, and said he was submitting his report to the Public Utilities Commission in an effort to have the buses governmentally owned, or, as a substitute, the institution of direct competition with the Capital Transit Co. on the part of the Government. The report said:

"If the situation concerning which this memorandum of complaint is presented is to continue, and if the present system of regulation fails to enforce such action as is conducive to public interest, then we, the public, must protect ourselves by seeking the establishment of a different system.

"We therefore specifically condemn the transportation system of the City of Washington, and we assert that * * * this commission has in the transportation system a situation with which it is inadequate to cope."

He also condemned the payment to the Transit Co. of any money in compensation for "intangible values," saying that: "If this results in any loss to holders of securities of the Transit Co., the onus rests on those officers whom they chose to run their business, who managed it in such a way that they bring loss upon their security holders." He added that "service to the public is more important than the gains of the company which is rendering the public service."

Hearing Monday

Complaints of overcrowding of street cars and buses, gaps in service, dirty equipment and lack of heating and ventillation are cited in hundreds of complaints filed with William A. Roberts, people's counsel, against the service of the Capital Transit Co.

Street car and bus service is to be considered at a public hearing called by the Public Utilities Commission to begin at 10 a. m. Monday. Mr. Roberts has called a meeting of representatives of citizens' and civic organizations in the District Building for 8 p. m. to discuss complaints and order of presentation at the hearing.

Opposes 'Red' Action

Harry N. Stull, vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, told the Burleith Citizens Association that, although he felt no citizens' association wanted school children indoctrinated with the idea of Communism, he did not agree with an association which demanded resignation of the Board of Education.

In speaking on bills to be brought before the coming session of Congress, Mr. Stull said he was against legalization of gambling in the District. He said this would not be in the interests of the children of the city.

Other business of the association included adoption of a resolution in favor of the continuation of a special committee inquiring into the possibility of securing a playground for Burleith; a resolution requesting the showing at the next meeting of a series of pictures on safe driving, and the appointment of a special committee to provide for the distribution of baskets of food for needy Georgetown families Christmas Day.

More Police Asked

The Summit Park Citizens Association asked that the proposed Thomas Jefferson Memorial be located in the Southeast section of the city, that more police be assigned to the Eleventh Precinct and that only District residents be appointed to District government positions.

The members also adopted a resolution to co-operate with Hillcrest Citizens Association in placing a Christmas tree at the corner of Alabama and Branch avenues.

The annual Christmas party was announced for Saturday, December 21. The meeting was preceded by original Christmas sketches given by the junior association.

Carol Pious, Lupescu A Myth, Says Bishop

BISHOP POLICARP MORUSCA.

Missionary to Have An Interview Today With Roosevelt.

Displaying a fine disdain for pussyfooting, the Most Rev. Policarp Morusca, first Rumanian Orthodox missionary bishop ever to visit the United States, received the press yesterday and seemed to enjoy the experience.

Neither he nor Minister Charles A. Davila, his interpreter in the legation interview, flinched when one intrepid reporter brought up the subject of Mme. Magda Lupescu, Rumania's highest representative of the church and state, respectively, in this country might excusably have sidestepped a discussion of their homeland's bete noire. But they didn't.

"Lupescu does not exist officially in Rumania," said the bishop in his native tongue. "Much more is made abroad of her relations with King Carol than at home. His Majesty is a faithful Orthodox churchman, highly respected by his people."

Bishop Morusca's jurisdiction includes North and South America and western Europe. Just past middle age, bearded and with straight, black hair, he is a picturesque figure in his official vestments.

Yesterday the affable minister presented his bishop to Secretary of State Hull and today the visiting dignitary will be received by President Roosevelt.

Bishop Morusca was outspoken on other controversial subjects besides Mme. Lupescu. His church and its members, he said, devoutly hope that the Italo-Ethiopian dispute will be settled without the world's being involved in another war. As for the sporadic anti-Semitic outbreaks in Rumania (several were injured in one last week), he blamed them on boisterous youths.

"My countrymen are not anti-Semitic," he said, gesturing freely. "Those demonstrations, irresponsible school boys start them. It's like—like——."

"Like your American Halloween pranks."

Yes, That's the Word.

The Rev. John Trutia, Cleveland pastor who accompanied the Bishop to Washington, came to his superior's rescue.

The Bishop, informed of the meaning of Halloween, nodded his approval and then added, with much gusto, that in the United States the pranksters don't have to pay for damage done while at home the Rumanian government foots the cost of their troublemaking.

Secretary Hull cordially greeted the eminent churchman and expressed pleasure that the bishop is advising his American communicants to be loyal and law-abiding citizens of this country.

"The Most Reverend Bishop comes here," volunteered the Rev. Mr. Trutia, "reechoing the message, 'Peace on earth, good will to men.'"

Minister Davila estimated that there are between 130,000 and 140,000 Rumanian Christians in the United States and approximately 250,000 in South America, the majority of them adherents of the Rumanian Orthodox church.

The missionary bishop has set up headquarters in Cleveland, a large percentage of whose population is Rumanian or Rumanian-American.

Roberts Asks Added Slash In Gas Rates

Companies' Reductions Would Be Increased By $53,000.

P. U. C. Decision on New Sliding Scale Due in a Week.

A reduction of $53,000 in addition to the reduction proposed by the gas companies in rates to domestic consumers using between 4,000 and 8,000 cubic feet of gas a month was suggested yesterday by William A. Roberts, people's counsel.

Mr. Roberts proposed that the domestic schedule proposed by the companies also should be changed so as to make consumption of 8,000 cubic feet of gas a month a "breaking" point; that is, to make proposed lower rates for greater consumption begin at 8,000 feet. The companies proposed 10,000 feet. This would save the consumer, he estimated, $7,400 a year.

The $53,000 which he would have applied to consumption between 4,000 and 8,000 feet would be obtained by lessening the proposed reduction in the old commercial and industrial rates. This schedule formerly yielded 13 per cent of the revenues. The companies proposed to reduce rates so that 18 per cent of the total reduction would apply to that schedule, and by lessening the reduction in rates to domestic consumers of more than 10,000 feet.

Decision Due in Week.

Readjustment of the rates proposed by the companies is expected to be made by the commission before it gives approval to the sliding-scale method submitted for determining future rate adjustments. The commission expects to announce its decision before the end of the week, it was said.

A development along another line was the announcement by the Public Utilities Commission that it would seek to ascertain what, if any, relationship there is between the new and former owners of 1,800 shares of beneficial interest in the Washington & Suburban Co., a Massachusetts common law trust, which holds 84 per cent of the 130,000 shares of common stock of the Washington Gas Light Co.

Owners Listed.

In was reported to the commission that the new owners were Herbert H. H. Blizzard & Co., of Philadelphia, 600 shares; Thompson T. Sweeny, Forest Hills, N. Y., 400; Alfred Peck, Booneton, N. J., 300; Allen J. Peck, Bronx, N. Y., 200; Amelie A. Wallace, New York City, 200, and Wilhelmina W. Martin, New York City, 100.

Local officials are interested in the sales because of their possible effect on the future control of the local gas companies, which soon must undertake rather large refinancing operations and undertake to have changed existing legislation restricting capital structure of the company. The La Follette anti-merger act, which bars foreign control of local utilities, may be involved, officials pointed out.

Jenckes Backs Allen Proposal For Referenda

Representative Is First to Indorse Plan for Use of Ballot Here.

The first Congressional indorsement of Commissioner George E. Allen's proposal that the District Commissioners be authorized to conduct referenda on issues of local interest came yesterday from Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, a member of the House District Committee.

"I am in favor of a referendum or some form of suffrage for the citizens of the District in order that Congress may receive directly from the citizens and taxpayers their views on spending legislation," she said.

Commissioner Allen had proposed that the referendum be used as a guide to the District heads, but not a mandatory instruction.

"If the matter is presented at the opening of the session from a sound, workable basis, I will use all my influence to back it in committee and on the floor of the House, Representative Jenckes said.

While Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, has not returned to Washington, she has long been a champion of suffrage for Washingtonians, and consequently is expected to indorse the Allen measure.

Idealism Held Greatest Need Of Modern Age

Dr. Sarton Foresees Higher Aspirations of Men Defeating Lower.

Higher human aspirations are destined to defeat the "erratic efforts of selfish men," declared Dr. George Sarton, historian of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, in a lecture last night at the organization's headquarters on Sixteenth street. The address was the third in the Elihu Root series presented by the institution.

Speaking on the history of science and the problems of today, Dr. Sarton defended an uncompromising idealism of which our age is more deeply in need than of anything else. He said, "the gentle, but continuous efforts of good men" are like drops of water cutting mountains.

"They must necessarily defeat the erratic efforts of selfish men, however strong the latter, and however weak themselves," he said. "In the long run generous ideas will survive ungenerous ones.

"The wonderful technical discoveries of the last century have not been an unmixed blessing; a large number of people are led astray by them and are foolish enough to confuse the possession and use of wonderful tools with culture. To improve our culture it is necessary on the one hand to humanize industry and labor, and on the other to humanize science itself."

Dr. Sarton suggested that means be found to integrate science with the rest of our culture "instead of allowing it to develop as an instrument foreign to it."

Autoist Held As Negligent In Girl Death

Baltimore Teacher Must Face Trial, Coroner's Jury Decides.

Had Passed Red Traffic Light Before Accident, Detective Reports.

A professor of science at Johns Hopkins University was yesterday remanded for Police Court trial by the coroner's jury investigating the death of Mary Eleanor Lee, 16-year-old student at Sacred Heart Academy, and a 14-year-old boy was taken to Children's Hospital in a critical condition last night as traffic continued to take its toll in the city's streets.

Albert K. Weinberg, 36, of Baltimore, the professor, was held under the negligent homicide act.

The Lee girl, whose home was at 4228 Military road northwest, was struck down at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street. She was thrown 42 feet and died within an hour at Georgetown University Hospital.

Prof. Weinberg, now under $2,000 bond pending trial, testified at the inquest yesterday that he did not see the traffic light as he approached the intersection. He said that while he had driven through Washington before he had not become accustomed to the lights in this city, so different are they from those in Baltimore.

Detective Sergt. Jerry Flaherty told the coroner's jury Prof. Weinberg's car entered the intersection on a red light after striking the girl.

Funeral services for Miss Lee will be held at 8:30 a. m. today from the Military road home of her guardians, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Dacey. A requiem mass will be said at Sacred Heart Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Ralph Willis, 14, was critically injured last night when he was struck by an automobile at Georgia avenue and Crittendon street northwest. The driver of the car, Harry D. Harradon, 51, of 1234 Hamilton street northwest, removed the youth to Children's Hospital.

The youth's injuries were diagnosed as a chest hemorrhage, abdominal injuries, fractured ribs and a possible fractured left shoulder.

The dinner, said to be Washington's largest yearly meal, will require 250 persons to serve it. The first dinner was given ten years ago. Doors open at 4:45 p. m. and close at 8.

Mystery Story Fails to Pack Its Old Punch

'Baldpate' Now at Keith's; Helen Hayes Likes Air; Theater Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE." RKO-Radio filmization of the mystery-comedy by George M. Cohan, based on the story by Earl Derr Biggers, adapted to the screen by Anthony Veiller and Wallace Smith, featuring Gene Raymond and Margaret Callahan, with Eric Blore, Moroni Olsen, Grant Mitchell, Henry Travers, Emma Dunn, Harry Beresford, Molly Lamont and Ray Mayer. Directed by Edward Kully and William Hamilton. Reviewed Tuesday afternoon.

In some unaccountable fashion the makers of the present screen version of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" permitted their principal thread of narrative to slip through their fingers.

I mean to say that, having ensconced their hero, Mr. McGee, rising young author, in the eerie fastnesses of the deserted inn on top of Baldpate Mountain, there to complete a novel within the span of 24 hours, on a wager with a friend, they proceed artlessly to forget all about their major premise, and the wager, and end their charade with a conventional and largely extraneous "clinch."

That, I submit, is no nice way to treat a yarn that is as well known to the customers as this Earl Derr Biggers-George M. Cohan concoction of suspense, mystery and thrills.

So Called by Courtesy.

This "suspense, mystery and thrills" business is written largely out of force of habit, because those are the elements "Seven Keys to Baldpate" ought to possess in greatest abundance. As a matter of fact, it does not possess any great amount of any of them.

Perhaps this stems back to the fact that the play is too well known by too many people by now to muster its old command over even the easiest of the surface risibilities.

Then again, it may be the slowly paced tempo at which the piece is played that has most to do with it.

Gene Raymond, cast in the role of the young novelist, for example, is not precisely the ideal actor for this sort of thing. His histrionic tricks, obviously calculated to lend the goings-on an antic liveliness, consist principally of cocking the head slightly to one side and glancing at the ostensibly mystifying developments out of the corner of the eye.

This, in time, loses something of its original expressiveness and ceases to create any valuable illusion in the mind of the spectator.

Mr. Raymond should go back to his "Zoo in Budapest."

Miss Callahan Follows Lead.

Margaret Callahan, the widely heralded new leading woman, who appears opposite Mr. Raymond as an ingenuous young New York newspaper reporter, shares the general fault of lifeless miming. In situations of seemingly imminent peril, Miss Callahan evidently is privy to Mr. Raymond's prescient knowledge that there is no danger and everything will come right in the end—guns, thugs, lunatic hermits or no guns, thugs and lunatic hermits!

There are those in the cast, however, who turn in interesting and effective performances, among them Henry Travers, Moroni Olsen, Eric Blore and Molly Lamont.

The veteran Mr. Travers is cast as the mountain "hermit and ghost," who now and again comes into possession of the key to the plot as well as one of the seven front-door keys to the deserted inn. He chortles with high efficiency over the plight of the women involved in the pursuit of $200,000 in currency, being a simple child of isolation who hates all women.

Mr. Moroni evidently is a better "straight" than "character" actor. He does better work in his present assignment, as gang leader in quest of the loot, than he did in either "The Three Musketeers" or "Annie Oakley." Mr. Blore even in his most serious moments is a gentleman of fine comic talents and Miss Lamont, not a familiar figure to these eyes, succeeds in getting tough with the hoodlums as if she really meant it.

Ninth "March of Time."

If the direction were as good as it should have been, "Seven Keys to Baldpate" would be a firmer and more tightly woven dramatic fabric than it is. But the Messrs. Killy and Hamilton appear to have been listening to Chopin's "Funeral March" at the time.

A new issue of the "Screen Snapshots," revealing intimate, off-duty shots of a surprising number of Hollywood celebrities, and "The March of Time," dealing with three topics of immediate interest, are the bill's major auxiliary attractions.

The "Time" reel, treating of the so-called "Townsend Plan" for old-age pensions, dope smuggling and Japan's systematic incursions upon North China territories, presented four days ahead of schedule, did not arrive from the laboratory in time for the first performance yesterday, but was screened at 2:50 p. m.

The Pathe News, with a closeup study of Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, is the final supplementary of a bill that needs to have a firecracker tied to its tail!

It was perhaps the most notable audience of the season that turned out for the opening of the George White "Scandals," at the National Theater Monday night. It rated extremely high, not only in personality, but in starch and epidermis, as well.

Down front on the drum side was discoverable a beautiful young blonde known to the theater's intelligentsia as one of the better platinum thrushes. It was Alice Faye, of the prosceniums and pictures, wondering, as the final curtain came down, what had happened to Rudy Vallee that he wasn't in that finale ensemble of the stars.

A lot of other people wondered the same thing, including, no doubt, Mr. White!

Incidentally, the biggest hand Cliff Edwards got during the entire evening—and it was plenty big — was when he showed up for a brief flash in the television "Year of 2036" scene, twanging that old ukulele he is named after. That should be the tip-off to Mr White, right there.

"Victoria Regina."

Gilbert Miller's "Victoria Regina" company, starring Helen Hayes in the role of the late British sovereign and introducing Vincent Price to American audiences in the role of the Prince Consort, arrived in Baltimore yesterday to complete rehearsals for the three-day engagement preceding the Washington opening next Monday night.

The capacity of the theater for the Baltimore engagement, in terms of money, is $12,000. The advance sale of tickets had reached the $7,500 mark last week-end, indicating that Miss Hayes has caught the Katharine Cornell habit of selling out at every performance in the Monumental City.

While Miss Hayes will not present any Tuesday evening performance of the play in Washington, her broadcast, nevertheless, will be made from this city through station WRC.

Sketches Take Time.

The stage performance is prevented by the elaborateness of Miss Hays' "New Penny" sketches" which will occupy a full half-hour each on the air. They are rehearsed as conscientiously and completely as any play and fall at an hour that cannot be reconciled with a later portrayal of an exhusting role in a full-length drama.

Having declined a flattering motion picture offer to embrace radio, Miss Hayes has laid down the strict rule that she will not appear on the stage on the days of her broadcasts.

In New York, where "Victoria Regina" will be presented, after Washington, it is probable that an extra Sunday night performance, or possibly an extra matinee, will be utilized to compensate for the curtailed week in the theater.

If you are interested enough to go back to Keith's for a minute, the Hollywood personalities introduced in that "Screen Snapshots" include, with a few others we probably have forgotten, Mary Brian, Richard Arlen, Mrs. Arlen (Jobyna Ralston), Mrs. Bing Crosby (Dixie Lee), Mr. and Mrs. Frank McHugh, Dick Powell, Regis Toomey, Thelma Todd, Patsy Kelly, Glenda Farrell, Ralph Bellamy, Mayo Mathot, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Butterworth, Pat O'Brien, Marian Marsh, Mrs. Ralph Bellamy and Victor Varconi.

"Hey, Rube!"

The circus is coming to town!

Sounds like a May or June announcement, instead of midwinter's, doesn't it?

But the circus is coming to town—in miniature and not under a big top. This particular Christmas innovation will be on the stage of Loew's Fox Theater and the time will be the week beginning Friday, December 20.

The Great Yacobis, noted acrobats; Schtil's Marionettes, Picard and his trained seal, Alf Loyal's dogs, Martin & Martin, sensational aerialists; Will Hay's elephants and the Wilbur Circus of trained dogs and ponies, will be among the components of this ideal Yuletide stage attraction.

What a treat for the youngsters! And all under roof and surrounded by the other features of the Fox's special holiday program. Even the calliope—four syllables, please, instead of three!—will be in evidence.

Hold your horses, the elephants are coming!

Something was said here a week or so ago about the drawing power of Hinda Wausau at the Gayety Theater; that she holds the all-time house record of 14 consecutive performances to standing-room audiences. Well, Hinda still exercises the same old lure. Last Saturday night's attendance at the Chesterfieldian Col. James J. Lake's palace of pulchritude on Ninth street was the biggest of the season, so far. Nice going, Miss Wausau.

Weather Forecast Note.

Speaking of the "Scandals," as almost everybody is, I perceive that, snow or no snow, the New Amsterdam Theater in New York is going to have a White Christmas!

Catch the drift?

Pierce Hall

"THAT GUY WINKLER." The Pierce Hall Players present a new comedy in three acts by Frank L. Baer, staged by Howard F. Wentworth, with stage setting by Ina Hawes. At Pierce Hall December 10 and 11. Reviewed Tuesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST

Helen Fitch.....Mary Lillias Garretson
Robert Crane.....Frank S. Koonce
Florrie.....Evelyn Schweizer
Eleanor Briggs.....Neota Silvers
Mrs. Hilda Wayne.....Lois Alexander
Oscar Winkler.....Ed C. Gardner
Adelaide Lynton.....Felice E. Loyd
Jane Merton.....Yerby Pannill
Hal Kemper.....Edmund Evans
Abner ("Pop") Eaton.....Howard Wentworth
J. Lawrence Phipps.....William Austin Davis
Detective Simpson.....Robert Sonen
Detective Fay.....Robert T. Allinson

The approach to perfection, to be acquired through practice, was again displayed last evening as Frank L. Baer's second dramatic venture, a three-act comedy entitled "That Guy Winkler," was produced by the Pierce Hall Players.

Showing a marked improvement over his "Rhapsody in Blah," the current play—incidentally, the sixth original offering staged by the Players—was a rather consistent laugh-getter, even if it was not too vivid in its character definition and a trifle weak in motivation.

Oscar Longfellow Winkler—a chap not dissimilar to the Nugents' "The Poor Nut"—is a Washington (but not governmental) auditor, who unwittingly tangles himself with a trio of gangsters. How "that guy Winkler" finally brings about the capture of the gangsters, returns the $300,000 (minus some $3,200, lifted in plain view of the audience), and conquers his Milquetoastian complex, forms the basis for a comedy with many truly amusing lines, an even greater number of ensemble entrances and exits, and little sustained "plot."

Third Act Disrupts Logic.

Through a palpable disregard of logic, however, Author Baer nearly brings his play to grief in the middle of the second act, when, in a moment of fast action, the tables are turned and the gangsters find themselves looking down the muzzle of their own machine gun. Then, they are unceremoniously kicked out of the house! If the author had been strictly logical, the play would have ended then and there—and would have been an excellent two-acter. Instead, the work becomes full-length—and in the process loses force.

Acting honors of the evening go to Ted C. Gardner, who makes the meek Winkler believable. Although the part is drawn with a slightly satirical pen, the playing minimizes this quality. Second player would be Mary Lillias Garretson, as the love interest, whose kiss transmogrifies weakness into strength.

Support and Direction.

The others of the cast—Frank S. (or Francis) Koonce, Evelyn Schweizer, Neota Silvers, Lois Alexander, Felice E. Lloyd, Yerby Pannill, Edmund Evans, Howard F. Wentworth, William Austin Davis, Robert Sonen, Robert T. Allinson—are effective in support depicting the various personalities to be found in a boarding house.

"That Guy Winkler" is no easy play through which to make a directorial debut, but Howard F. Wentworth has done an excellent job. Faced with a plethora of group entrances and exits, together with action and words in profusion, he has manipulated his company to reduce to the minimum the inherent confusion.

Ina Hawes' single setting is simple and effective.

Mr. O'Brien is expected to arrive in the National Capital today for his week of personal appearances on the stage of the Earle Theater, beginning Friday. He also is featured in the screen attraction for the new week, "Stars Over Broadway," in which Jane Froman, Frank McHugh and James Melton likewise are prominently cast.

Miss Perkins Raps Opponent Of Pension Act

Breaks Speech to Attack Epstein, Critic of Social Security Law.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 10.—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins interrupted her prepared address before the National Consumers League today to take to task an opponent of the Federal social security act.

In the mistaken belief that Abraham Epstein, executive secretary of the American Association for Social Security, was in the audience, Miss Perkins said:

"While Mr. Epstein is still in the room, I want to say that I think he has contributed a great disservice to wage earners by his inexcusable, unjustified attack on legislation which attempts to provide old-age pensions and abolish insecurity."

She said she referred to a magazine article by Epstein.

Epstein, returning to the room later, told reporters he had criticized the act because he believed that in many States it would be constitutionaly impossible to pass supporting laws.

"Under the present bill with its errors," he said, "we will now have a hodge-podge of 48 different kinds of laws."

Miss Perkins, introduced by John G. Winant, league president, as the "greatest Secretary of Labor in history," said in her formal address that labor legislation had progressed beyond administrative competency in most States.

Appointive employes usually take a year becoming familiar with the work, she said, anad spend the second year fearing for their jobs. With the election of a new Governor they frequently are turned out.

The League adopted a resolution opposing an "equal rights" amendment to the Federal Constitution which would invalidate special legislation passed for the benefit of women workers.

The league re-elected Winant, chairman of the Federal Social Security Board and former Governor of New Hampshire, as president. Elizabeth Brandeis, of Madison, Wis., daughter of Supreme Court Justice Louis Brandeis, was elected a vice president.

Russell Warns Of Relief Need, Quits Job Here

Legion Official Says Bonus Will Not End Distress of War Veterans.

With a blast at "square-pegging-in-a-round-hole type of quick relief" and an assertion that payment of the bonus would not alleviate distress among unemployed veterans, John Russell, chief of the American Legion's news service, yesterday resigned that position.

Filing his resignation, effective December 31, Russell ascribed it to "reasons of economy in legion finances" and because his office had been merged now in that of the executive secretary of the legion's national legislative committee, a post recently given to William C. Barnes, of Chicago, Ill.

Russell was brought here as the personal representative of Frank N. Belgrano, former legion commander.

Reasons similar to those of Russell were given by Edward McE. Lewis recently when he resigned as head of the legion press department.

Payment of the bonus, Russell said in his resignation statement, would boom general business conditions but "will only be a temporary aid to the veteran who must spend his money to benefit all the people."

Some sort of vocational placement would have to be worked out to relieve veterans' unemployment, Russell said, for, he went on, "unless some solution is found in the near future to bring about the elimination of this problem by providing permanent jobs for veterans who now approach the average age of 44 years, the drive for general pensions will come like a thundering herd of elephants rushing across the wastelands of despair."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Piano recital by Sergei Rakhmaninov in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Program: Thirty-two variations in C minor (Beethoven), Three Sonatas (Scarlatti), Sonata in B minor (Chopin), Poeme and Etude (Skryabin), Fairy Tale (Medtner), Scherzo (Borodin), Barcarolle (Rubinstein), Etude and Prelude (Rakhmaninov), Etude-Caprice (Dohnanyi).

Power and gentleness are combined in the technique of Sergei Rakhmaninov as are austerity and poetry in his temperament. The former two qualities are responsible for his great span of dynamic gradations and for his skill in making clear the intricacies of structure, in contrasting massive solidity with arabesques of gossamer. The stern and the tender facets of his nature are alternately disclosed in his interpretations, so peculiarly his own, so at variance with the standardized.

In his mastery of the keyboard, it is power that predominates and imposes upon his every articulation of phrase an air of authority which makes one convinced for the moment of the finality of his reading. So overwhelming is the surge of his strength and so logical the presentation of his ideas that one is swept away by the very speed of his argument.

It must be from an austere reserve, from a conserved spiritual force that he draws the cool radiance of his playing. In the reverberations of his thunderous fortissimos and in the flashing of his lightning-like runs there is light without heat. About him broods an air of timelessness, for the man of 63 retains the elan of youth. In the veins of this master pianist pulses an ichor that does not age.

The program was one that did not afford the listener any adventures of novelty save in the relatively unfamiliar etude and prelude of Rakhmaninov's own. It was perhaps deliberate intent that placed the Beethoven variations cheek by jowl with thre sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti, for there are those who say that Beethoven's early works show the influence of the Italian. As though to drive that point home, the two composers were treated in an identical style.

At first it seemed odd to hear the bravura manner applied to Scarlatti, until one recalled that Domenico was a virtuoso on the clavichord and displayed here and there, from Spain to England, his inventions in technique, such as crossing the hands on the keyboard.

The B minor sonata of Chopin took on a deeply tragic visage under Rakhmaninov's molding hands. His reading was magnificent, approaching the epic in its sweep, and the slow movement surely never was played with a more poignant eloquence.

A large and demonstrative audience enjoyed every moment of the recital and recalled the performer repeatedly. At the close of the program, the demand for extra numbers was answered with four, including Rakhmaninov's elaborately difficult concert paraphrase of Kreisler's "Liebesleid," Rimski-Korsakov's "Flight of the Bumblebee," and—the C sharp minor prelude.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Dec. 10.

MARLENE DIETRICH and Gary Cooper play a scene for "Desire." It is completed. A new set-up is being arranged. Marlene sits in a chair and talks to the make-up woman. Cooper goes for a stroll.

Joan Blondell.

Director Frank Borzage says: "Great gal, that Dietrich! It is really a pleasure to have her in a picture. What a cook! You should have been with us yesterday. We were on location. Dietrich got up at 4:30 in the morning, an hour earlier than usual, to prepare lunch and take it on location; three chickens, soup, delicious cake and all kinds of cheeses."

Borzage waxed enthusiastic. "She cooked it herself and then served us. There was just Cooper, Charlie Lang, the cameraman; myself and her. She hardly eats a thing. But she loves to cook and wait on people. A great actress to have in a picture, eh?"

• • • •

Of course I agreed. "While youre waiting for the set-up," I said to Borzage, "how about going next door on the Mae West set with me. I'd like to watch a director watch another director at work."

We went next door, where Miss West is making "Klondike Lou." Director Raoul Walsh was giving instructions. Director Walsh generally speaks in a "What Price Glory" lingo. His speech is easy and free. His gags often make Miss West and Victor McLaglen forget their lines for a moment and laugh. Director Borzage watched with almost the interest of a visitor. "I always learn when looking at another director," he said.

• • • •

IT was a rehearsal. Miss West and Mr. McLaglen recited their lines and made the necessary gestures. Director Walsh, when giving instructions, prefers to get into the role and act it. He plays the McLaglen part well, but it is amusing to see him do the Mae West role.

Mae West and McLaglen play their love scene. Miss West is a realistic actress. When she plays a love scene, it doesn't appear that she's playing. This, she insists, is her art. Mae West puts feeling in her work. And you don't have to believe me. You can ask McLaglen.

Director Borzage is ready to return to his set. He thanks Director Walsh for the show. "That West is a great performer, isn't she?" I asked Borzage. "Yes," he answers. "But I don't care what you say, I'll bet she can't cook like Dietrich."

• • • •

Harry Richman is sitting on the set of "Rolling Along." It is a little past 11 o'clock in the morning. Richman has been there since 9 o'clock in the morning. He shouts to Director Victor Schertzinger: "Hey, let me get in a scene, will you? Anything. I'll walk through a door with my back to the camera so they won't see me, but let me do something as long as you've got me here." Director Schertzinger goes on with his picture. Then Richman comes over and starts to tell me stories, which can't be printed in a column. Director Schertzinger gets ready to shoot a scene and is giving his orders. But before he can ask for "Quiet" on the set, Richman shouts to him: "Quiet, please, with that picture, I'm telling a story. Don't interrupt."

• • • •

JOAN BLONDELL, Jack Oakie and a number of girls are doing a Truckin' routine to the song, "You Gotta Know How to Dance," for the flicker, "Colleen." Dick Powell comes on the set to look at the dance and to wait for Miss Blondell.

The assistant director says to Powell: "You won't have to play the clarinet. We've got some one to do it." Powell answers: "That's fine. They won't let me play the clarinet, and I can really play it. But because I don't know a thing about the piano, I must always play it."

Among the girls on the set, there are Nancy Lyons, Marie Stevens, Marion Ladd and Collette Frances, who have been in Broadway musicals and night clubs. In fact, Collette is strictly a backstage and cafe girl. When asked how she liked Hollywood, she replied: "I'm getting too much rest, and I haven't been drinking and it's no good for me. I'm getting dark circles under my eyes—look."

• • • •

It is really Broadway, the old Broadway, in Hollywood. On a stage for "The Great Ziegfeld," Ann Pennington and Gilda Gray are doing numbers that they did in the "Follies." Pennington, showing her dimpled knees, sings the ditty, "Pretty Penny." Then Gilda Gray comes on and she sings "It's Getting Dark on Old Broadway." They try to be the same Penny and the same Gilda that they were in the genuine "Follies." One feels mixed emotions watching yesterday today. Gilda expresses the feeling when she says: "I feel happy and sad at the same time."

Association Asks Test Of Trade Agreements

J. Carson Adkerson, president of the American Manganese Producers' Association, yesterday called a conference of raw material industries to "consider proper moves to test the constitutionality" of the reciprocal tariff act.

"Manufacturers and consumers want raw material as cheaply as possible," he said. "Through reciprocal trade treaties tariffs on American raw materials are being traded away and advantages are given to manufactured products."

Seven Drowned In Houston Flood

Score Missing as Waters Recede in Texas.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Dec. 10.—Seven persons were dead and almost a score were missing today as the swollen Buffalo Bayou receded after a $2,000,000 rampage through the heart of the city Sunday.

The bodies of five Negro children and a Negro man were recovered, but searchers had not located the body of Ollie Wilson, 15, swept to his death in the flood.

Many sections of the business district remained under water today, but 29 schools were reopened after the water receded.

Louis to Face Schmeling In June

German Signs Contract in 30 Minutes; Each Gets 30 Per Cent.

Acts After Commission Turns Down Battle With Braddock.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Max Schmeling signed today to fight Joe Louis, the Negro punching sensation, in a 15-round bout in the Yankee Stadium next June.

Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Sporting Club landed the plum, expected to gross boxing's second million-dollar gate in less than a year. Each fighter will receive 30 per cent of the net gate, with Mrs. W. R. Hearst's Milk Fund taking 10 per cent off the top.

The German walked into Jacobs' office and signed within half an hour after the New York State Athletic Commission frankly told him he could not fight Jimmy Braddock for the heavyweight title until he had disposed of Louis.

Flanked by Mike Jacobs and representatives of the Milk Fund, the German paid a surprise visit to the Boxing Commission and in his best English said:

"Gentlemen, I am here at the invitation of Madison Square Garden to discuss a match with Jimmy Braddock. Will you gentlemen permit me to fight Braddock for the title?"

Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, replied:

"We regard you as an outstanding contender, of course, but we feel you should first meet Joe Louis, who also merits such ranking. Therefore, our answer is no."

Schmeling didn't hesitate a moment.

"All right, I will fight Louis."

Mike Jacobs hastily assembled a fleet of taxicabs and headed a parade to his uptown office before anybody could change his mind. Ten minutes after he was closeted with Jacobs, the German signed and the announcement was made.

Louis agrees he will not sign for any more fights after the three he has booked with Paulino Uzcudun in the Garden Friday night, with Isidor Gastanaga in Havana, December 29, and with Charlie Retzlaff in Chicago, January 31.

Louis was scheduled for a second fight in the Garden in March, but Mike Jacobs said he has the rest of the year to stage this show. This may pave the way for a title match between Louis and Braddock in the fall with Jacobs and the Garden as co-promoters. The Negro is under contract to Jacobs until 1940 and Braddock is under contract to the Garden for his first title defense.

Schmeling will watch Louis in action against Paulino Friday night. He sails for Germany on Sunday, but has agreed to return to New York and begin training for the Negro at least six weeks before the fight.

The date will be selected when the American League schedule is published and the home dates of the Yankees are known.

Jimmy Braddock and Joe Gould, his manager, received the news with satisfaction.

"Just what we wanted," shouted Gould. "That colored boy will knock Schmeling's brains out; then he and my Jimmy will do a million and a half!"

Wilson Five Trims Shenandoah, 47-30

Phil Fox and Bill Mitchell enjoyed a Roman holiday last night as Wilson Teachers College scored its second consecutive victory of the season, defeating Shenandoah, 47-30, on the Wilson court.

Fox located the hoop for six field goals and three fouls, 15 points, while Mitchell came through with four double-deckers and five fouls, 13 points. Their combined efforts were almost enough to whip the valley five.

Foxx, Pleased, Thinks He'll Top Ruth's Mark

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Jimmy Foxx, last star of Connie Mack's unbeatable Athletics of 1931, expressed himself as "tickled to death" when informed of his sale today to the Boston Red Sox.

"It's a break for me," Foxx said. "I think a change will help me and I should improve my batting average at Fenway Park. It has the best layout in the majors for a right-hand hitter. I think I can top Babe Ruth's record there."

Krueger Again Tops Pros in Florida

By the Associated Press.

SARASOTA, FLA., Dec. 10.—Streaking over the Bobby Jones links in a rare exhibition, Alvin "Butch" Krueger, of Beloit, Wis., today smeared par by 5 strokes and took a commanding lead at the half-way point of the $2,000 Sarasota Open golf tournament.

Krueger carded a 66, 5 under par, for a thirty-six-hole total of 133. A 67 for the first round gave him a slight edge, but a string of birdies today left him 5 strokes up on the band of touring pros, who found the going tougher today.

Out in 34, only 2 below conventional figures, the Beloit professional tightened his belt and came home in 32.

Far in his wake, Craig Wood, of New York, and Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., fought it out for second place and came up with a tie at 138. Ghezzi eased up slightly and took a 70 to add to his 68 for the first round, while Wood had two 69s.

Keiser, Revolta Close.

Herman Keiser, of Springfield, Mo., and Johnny Revolta, professional at the Miami Biltmore course and P. G. A. champion, pressed close behind with 139s.

In the van of the amateurs, including several major league baseball players, was Morton McCarthy, of Norfolk, Va., with 141. He had a 72, 1 over par, to add to his 69 of yesterday.

Willis Hudlin, pitcher for the Cleveland Indians, slipped badly after shooting a brilliant 69 on the first 18 and posted a 77 for an aggregate score of 146.

Two pros were knotted at 140 and retained an outside chance to overhaul Krueger in the 36-hole final tomorrow. They were Bill Mehl-

Night Ball Rejected By American League

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Club owners of the American League today voted unanimously against the introduction of night baseball in the younger of the major league circuits.

The National League, however, voted to continue its night game policy, allowing each club, that so desired, to play no more than 7 night games. The Nationals also re-elected Ford Frick as president with a 2-year term at a salary increase and Harvey Traband as vice-president in addition to his duties as secretary.

The 1936 All-Star game will be played at Braves Field, Boston.

Other actions taken by the respective leagues were:

National League

Agreed on a retirement fund for umpires after 15 years of service. Details of the plan will be worked out later.

Reported a 20 per cent increase in attendance for 1935 over 1934.

Went on record as favoring that the advisory council (Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, President Will Harridge of the A. L. and President Frick of the N. L.) make all umpire selections for World Series and all-star games.

Named Phil K. Wrigley, Chicago; Charles Stoneham, New York; Gerald Nugent, Philadelphia, and William Benswanger, Pittsburgh, on the board of directors.

American League.

Voted an annual award of $500, starting in 1936, to the American League batting champion.

Elected Walter O. Briggs, new sole owner of the Detroit Tigers, to league membership.

Elected Col. Ruppert, J. Louis Comiskey, Chicago; Alva Bradley, Cleveland, and Tom Yawkey, Boston, on the board of directors.

Adopted a resolution on the death of Frank J. Navin.

Among the rumors floating around baseball headquarters today were:

The Red Sox will peddle Outfielder Roy Johnson. They are hot after Pitcher Monte Pearson of Cleveland. Yankees have offered Pitcher Johnny Allen to Indians in a hoped-for deal for Pearson.

Pitcher Curt Davis, of the Phillies, will be traded to the Chicago Cubs for Outfielder Chuck Klein, former home run idol of Baker Bowl.

Dixie Grid Loop Votes Player Remuneration

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The Dixie Conference, closely knit association of 10 Old South colleges, tonight formally recognized legality of furnishing room, board and tuition to star athletes as remuneration for their services.

Almost without articulate opposition, directors of the "Baby Ten" of the South, drastically revised rules to bring the question of compensation of football players into the open.

Army-Navy 1936 Site Moved to City Stadium

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (AP).—Mayor-elect S. Davis Wilson said today the 1936 Army-Navy football game will be played at the Municipal Stadium instead of the traditional site, the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field.

The Municipal Stadium, scene of the first Dempsey-Tunney fight in 1926 and used for few important sports events since then, can be arranged to seat 120,000 spectators. Franklin Field seats 80,000.

Grid Branded Racket by Professor

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 10.—Branding college football as a major racket, Prof. George Owen, sr., of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, today advocated the hiring of star athletes on a day-laborer basis.

This father of the famous Harvard backfield star, who startled the football world himself 12 years ago by describing the gridiron sport as "drudgery I never enjoyed," accused Notre Dame, Ohio State and all the other major colleges, including Harvard, of football commercialism.

$1,000 Ordinary Wage.

He alleged, before the Cambridge Industrial Association, that the ordinary wage paid by colleges for a promising football player was $1,000 or a soft job that is the merest sham to cover the real transaction."

After citing his interest in his son, who became an outstanding professional hockey player with the Boston Bruins soon after graduation, as proof that he knew what he was talking about "both from the standpoint of the locker room and grand stand," Owen senior accused Notre Dame and Ohio State as being the "greatest offenders" in the college ranks.

Berwanger Prefers Olympic Berth to Pro Football Career

By Alan Gould,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—John Jacob (Jay) Berwanger, the football toast of the big town today, will not yield to professional inducements until he has finished his studies at the University of Chicago and tried for a place on the United States Olympic track team next summer.

The broad-shouldered boy from Dubuque, hailed as the year's outstanding player and unanimous choice for all America halfback, already has a half-dozen offers to play professional football next year or commercialize his college reputation otherwise. He is in more demand than any football product of the Big Ten since the celebrated Red Grange finished at the University of Illinois and embarked on a checkered professional career.

The Chicago Bears are understood to have made flattering inducements to Berwanger. Eastern clubs in the National League also are interested in the player rated generally as the best all-round blocker, tackler and ball-carrier in this year's college ranks. Paul Schissler, coach of the Brooklyn team, called on Berwanger and his coach, Clark D. Shaughnessy, today. To all reports about his future, however, Berwanger said:

"I haven't decided what I will do. I may play professional football next fall, because of its practical advantages. I might take a coaching job, although it is my ultimate intention to enter business in preference to making a career in professional athletics. For the time being I am mainly interested in finishing my courses at Chicago, graduating next June and then trying to win a place on the Olympic team."

Berwanger is captain of the University of Chicago track team. An all-around athletic, he intends to train for the Olympic Decathlon tryouts.

Coaches, former all-America stars and football followers joined in feting Berwanger today. The Downtown Athletic Club, at a luncheon in his honor, presented him a massive trophy emblematic of his selection as the outstanding football player of the year, based upon a newspaper vote confined to territory east of the Mississippi River. The Touchdown Club, of which John W. Heisman is president, honored Berwanger at a dinner tonight.

Joining in the tribute to Berwanger were Ellmore Patterson, 1934 Chicago captain, "Pa" Corbin, noted Yale hero of the 80's and Hector Cowan, Princeton tackle and member of Walter Camp's first all-America team in 1889.

"The best thing about Berwanger is that he's unspoiled by all this," said his coach, Shaughnessy. "He's a great kid as well as a natural athlete and good student."

Manush May Go to Tribe For Monte Pearson or Hildebrand.

Griffith May Give Kuhel and Cash to Browns for Burns, Knott.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

PALMER HOUSE, Chicago, Ill., Dec. 10.—Out of the maze of negotiations to which the Washington ball club was a party as the major league trading sessions opened here today developed four distinct possibilities that may involve Washington players:

1. The trade of Outfielder Heinie Manush to the Cleveland Indians for either Pitcher Monte Pearson or Pitcher Oral Hildebrand.

2. The trade of Pitcher Earl Whitehill and First Baseman Joe Kuhel to the Chicago White Sox in exchange for Pitcher Les Tietje and First Baseman Zeke Bonura.

3. The trade of Manush to the New York Yankees in exchange for either Pitcher Johnny Murphy or Johnny Broaca.

4. The trade of First Baseman Joe Kuhel and a sum of cash to the St. Louis Browns in exchange for First Baseman Jack Burns and Pitcher Joe Knott.

Groundwork Is Laid.

Manager Bucky Harris laid the groundwork for the projected deals throughout the day, while Owner Clark Griffith was engaged in the American League directors' and club owners' meetings.

Harris engaged virtually every other American League manager in conversations with a view, firstly, of obtaining added pitching strength, and, secondly, increasing the team's batting power.

Griffith's absence from the trading mart in the hotel lobbies slowed the progress of negotiations, but tonight Harris was able to lay before him an almost complete set-up of trading possibilities. The Washington owner is expected to complete at least one trade tomorrow.

Prospects Brightened.

Harris declared Washington's prospects for completing a deal, or several deals at the meeting here had brightened perceptibly as a result of the announcement of the sensational Foxx-to-Boston and Simmons-to-Detroit deals. Both Cleveland and New York, particularly, are now in a frenzy to bolster their clubs to meet the new Boston threat.

Most probable of the deals outlined is the projected deal with Cleveland for a pitcher. The Indians are in desperate need of an outfielder to round out a garden trio now comprised chiefly of Joe Vosmik and Earl Averill and they are seemingly intent on acquiring Manush. The proximity of the right-field fence in Cleveland, an easy target for Manush's southpaw batting, is a powerful argument for the trade.

Cleveland expects to give up a pitcher in return for Manush, whom Harris believes has outworn his usefulness in Washington. Either Pearson or Hildebrand, both top-flight right-handers will be demanded by the Nats.

Laughs Off Proposal.

Harris today laughed off a proposition by Cleveland for Buddy Myer. The Indians offered second baseman Bozie Berger and one Gleason, a New Orleans outfielder,

ROBERT QUINN.

Former Red Sox Owner Acquires Adams' Stock; Provides New Capital.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The National League today voted to award the franchise and players of the financially crippled Boston Club to Robert Quinn, for three years business manager of the Brooklyn Club. Quinn will become president and general manager.

Ford Frick, president of the National League, said Quinn agreed to assume all the present obligations of the defunct Boston club and to provide sufficient additional working capital to put the club back on its feet.

Quinn's proposition was the only one received which would enable the payment of debts and the protection of creditors.

Under the terms of Quinn's proposal, all stockholders in the dissolved Boston Baseball Co. will be given opportunity to participate in the new company on the same basis that Quinn himself is coming in.

Charles F. Adams, the majority holder of the old stock and who personally sacrificed $250,000 in the old organization, already has extended his full support and credit to Quinn in putting the Boston club back on its feet. Adams, under the new setup, will have no stock in the new organization. He will hold no official position and will in no way be active in the conduct of the club's affairs.

Griffith Wins Fight For Smaller Fees

Youths Under 13 May See Games for Quarter.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Palmer House, Chicago, Dec. 10. Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington ball club, today won his fight to admit youths under 13 to regular American League games for a 25-cent fee, but the ruling awaits National League approval.

The American League club owners, in their annual meeting, unanimously approved Griffith's suggestion. Favorable action by the National League in a joint meeting on Thursday is necessary for its adoption.

Four Players Are Sent to Cards by Giants for Whitehead.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Baseball trade winds that had been swirling in rumor for several months broke loose today in a veritable gale of developments that scattered talent and cash over six major league clubs.

Well-defined suspicions held by the baseball world since the waning weeks of the 1935 season were verified when:

Venerable Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, announced that he had traded First Baseman Jimmy Foxx and Pitcher Johnny Marcum to the Boston Red Sox in exchange for Pitcher Gordon Rhodes, Catcher George Savino and an unannounced sum of cash estimated at $175,000.

Manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox announced that he had sold Outfielder Al Simmons outright to the champion Detroit Tigers for an undisclosed sum of cash estimated at $50,000.

Giants Get Whitehead.

Manager Bill Terry of the Giants announced that he had obtained Infielder Burgess Whitehead from the St. Louis Cardinals in exchange for four players—

Donee, Little Argo Win Charles Town Double to Pay $342.60

Odd Pay-Off Provided by Victories

$41 and $6 Victors Give Bettors $219 More Than in Parlay.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 10.—If this race track cannot supply some new thrill in the actual running of a race it can be depended on for something out of the ordinary in a monetary way. Today the daily double provided the chief topic of conversation. A $342.60 mutuel was paid on the combination of Donee, a $41 horse in the second race, and Little Argo, a $6 favorite in the third race.

Despite the fact that Little Argo was an established choice in every morning line and in actual betting, the "double" pay-off was third in the list of possibilities after Donee had provided the first half of the twin bet. Scotty Don, a 5-to-1 shot in the wagering on the race, was the favorite in the "double."

The freak line-up resulted, of course, from the fact that the race and double pools are separate. Those who had Little Argo received $219 more in the "double" than they would have had they parlayed the money in the regular race—for race betting.

Enthusiasm Winner.

The day's feature race, the Quickster, proved a hop, skip and a jump for Enthusiasm, a son of Bubbling Over, wearing the colors of Mrs. John Hay Whitney, popular sportswoman. With Jockey Shanks doing little more than guiding, Enthusiasm forged to the front after the first few yards and galloped home five lengths in advance of Small Devil. Ada Wan was third in the 4½-furlong contest.

Enthusiasm's prowess was no secret and those who wagered on the gelding were satisfied with the $3.40 mutuel.

A crowd of 3,500 saw an interesting program run over a heavy track. The weather was balmy and the sagging clouds retained their moisture throughout the afternoon.

Lucid Pays $30.40.

Lucid, a spry daughter of Luculite and Delia, surprised by taking the first race at a $30.40 mutuel. Scout On, the favorite, was second and probably would have won but for being blocked while making his move on the swing for the stretch. At that, Lucid just lasted to take the decision by a head. Brooke Herod, the pace-setter most of the way, was third.

To the tune of a $41 mutuel, Donee won the second race under the excellent handling of Jockey Joe Cawley, circling the leaders entering the stretch and then drawing clear to draw far out approaching the wire. Mazyniata outstayed Small Change to take the place money in the field of seven.

Little Argo, the favorite, proved much the best in the third race. After being steadied behind the pace of Scotty Don most of the way, Little Argo took command at his rider's will when turned loose turning into the stretch. Hard Chase went evenly most of the 7 furlongs, to be third. Little Argo paid $6.

Black Ribbon proved Jockey Joe Cowley's second winner of the card. The black colt paid $9.20 and was barely home by a nose ahead of Luke Connell. Chatteress was third in the field of eight.

LUCID, sent to the outside after entering the back stretch, reached the pacemakers rapidly, came around BROOKEHEROD when reaching the home stretch and, continuing strongly after gaining command, outstayed SCOUT ON. Latter, slower than usual to settle in stride, responded with good speed in the late stages and was wearing the winner down fast at the end. BROOKEHEROD outran his field to the first turn, saved ground thereafter, but failed to rally in the closing drive. MABLE STAR, squeezed back entering the back stretch, held on well after regaining his stride. ROYAL SPLENDOR went well placed but was not good enough. OAKWOOD GIRL was held safe. CANTIDE stopped early.

DONEE outrun until straightened into the back stretch, worked his way to the leaders rapidly, wore SMALL CHANGE down when reaching the home stretch and drew out fast nearing the end. MAZYNIATA, steadied around the first turn, went up between SMALL CHANGE and GOOD JEST midway of the back stretch, challenged strongly, but was unable to stay with the winner. SMALL CHANGE had good speed while setting the pace, saved ground, but weakened in the last quarter mile. SEA FINN was under strong urging for the entire trip. BLACK DREAMS went evenly. GOOD JEST began tiring after half a mile. PORDINA was outrun.

THIRD RACE—About seven furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:38. Off at once. Winner, C. LITTLE ARGO, taken under slight restraint when SCOTTY DON was rushed to the front, held to a contending position when settled on the back stretch, swung to the outside to wear the pacemaker down at the stretch turn, then came out under severe pressure. SCOTTY DON, hard ridden to get to the front, shook off BARNEY SEXTON but could not resist the winner after being placed to punishment. HARD CHASE, permitted to fall back at the turn into the back stretch, went to the outside thereafter and closed stoutly. INFILEE closed strongly from a slow beginning. BARNEY SEXTON weakened after five furlongs. WHISKORA stopped.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK RIBBON, $9.20, $4.80, $3.00; LUKE CONNELL, $3.20, $2.40; CHATTERESS, $2.80.

BLACK RIBBON, quick to get going and showing good ability in the footing, opened up a clear lead midway of the back stretch, was forced to a drive in the late stages and held on strongly to withstand LUKE CONNELL. Latter, taken up repeatedly in the first five furlongs, found racing room when taken to the outside in the last three furlongs and finished with a belated rush. CHATTERESS went prominently from the beginning and came strongly in the closing drive. RECITAL passed tiring horses in the closing stages. TUNEFUL worked her way into contention at the final bend but weakened approaching the finish. HARMOAK was used up in the first half mile.

FIFTH RACE—About four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; allowances. For all ages. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:35. Off at 3:38. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Whitney's ch. g. (3), by Bulling Over—Trifling. Trained by W. Bethel. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 0:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENTHUSIASM, $3.40, $3.20, $3.00; SMALL DEVIL, $5.00, $3.60; ADA WAN, 15.20.

ENTHUSIASM, much the best, took command immediately after the start, held sway throughout and was never threatened. SMALL DEVIL gradually improved his position and hung on well. ADA WAN, well up from the start, had no excuses. CLEAR KNIGHT raced evenly. LITTLE WING could not threaten. The others were outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:11½. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:51 1-5, 1:19 2-5, 1:45 3-5, 1:56 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT SPIRITS, $10.80, $5.80, $3.80; IRISH VOTE, $5.60, $3.40; MISS CATALAN, $3.20.

BRIGHT SPIRITS, away quickly and hustled to hold command around the turn, met strong contention from IRISH VOTE from the beginning, was strongly shaken up entering the home stretch and moved away gradually nearing the finish. IRISH VOTE was steadied close to the winner for the six furlongs, went to a hard drive in the late stages but failed to threaten. MISS CATALAN, permitted to drop far out, offered contention after breaking forwardly, closed with a rush in the last half mile. TOLIMATA, placed on the outside from the start, raced around her field to gain a forward position, but tired when the real test came. REDIVIVUS could not better his position at any stage. PUKKA HEAVEN weakened after going six furlongs.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and a quarter. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:37. Off at 4:38½. Winner, Miss J. Johnson's b. g. (9), by Blanford—Osmunda. Trained by Miss J. Johnson. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:26, 0:53, 1:23 2-5, 1:49 2-5, 2:19 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LATIVICH, $3.60, $3.20, $2.60; THE WORKER, $16.80, $6.00; BAY WRACK, $3.60.

LATIVICH assumed command soon after the start, raced under steadying restraint for the first seven furlongs, met strong bids from THE WORKER and held on willingly when placed to light punishment in the final drive. THE WORKER, well placed in the early racing, challenged strongly in the final half mile and fought it out gamely until the close. BAY WRACK improved his position steadily and closed full of run on the inside during the final issue. ANIMESSIC was rated forwardly from the beginning. Rallied repeatedly, but was not good enough. WISHING STAR could not make up any ground when forced to a hard drive. PORPHYRY lacked speed to enter contention. PENANG stopped badly.

Catholic U. Five Plays Roanoke Tonight; G. W. Off for Ohio

Gallico

Happy U. S. Entered Games; Says A. A. U. Meeting Was Loaded.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The sound and the fury of the recent A. A. U. meeting has faded into the ether, and as predicted many months ago, the Americans will participate in the Olympic games which makes it nice for our athletes. A trip to the European Olympic games is an unforgettable experience for an American athlete, and one to which by loyalty, good faith and performance, he is entitled. I am glad now that the party in favor of sending the team won out, for the sake of the youngsters who have been looking forward since 1932, for the chance to compete. Very few track and field men last to take part in more than one Olympic game. That four-year stretch between shows rob them of their edge. It looks now as if there will be peace in Europe next summer. Let the athletes have their fling at the world titles.

Seen in retrospect, and over a period of time, there is something very amusing about the high indignation in this country that the pure and holy Olympic games should be used in Germany for official propaganda and personal purposes. There have been screams of pure anguish on this side of the water to the effect that the Olympic games are being operated merely for the aggrandizement and advertisement of the Nazi Party. Sport must be kept free and pure from politics and nationalism. We don't do things like that over here. Oh, no, we don't.

Oh, no, indeed; not we. We're different. We're high-minded. We're just wonderful. The last three months the Olympic games issue has been strictly a personal political football in this town. And for longer than that Olympic games, supposed to be the pure essence of international sport, have been used in this country as a means of racial revenge upon Germany, with no one consulting the athletes as to THEIR wishes.

IF America pulled out of the Olympic games, it would be a considerable blow to Germany. A great many Americans have been trying to deal that blow for their own sweet selves.

Tech Five Meets C. U. Cubs Tonight

Tech High, playing its first game under its new coach, Rusty Thompson, opens its basketball season tonight against the formidable opposition provided by Catholic University's Freshmen. The toss-up is slated for 7 p. m. The game will be a preliminary to C. U.'s game with Maryland State.

With only one letter man from last year's team, George Hahn, back in uniform, Tech enters its initial test a decided underdog. The new coach has been directing the squad for a couple of months now, however, and during the period has uncovered several promising new recruits. Though young and green, the first string squad has developed fast under its tutor. Tonight's game and that against the G. W. Freshmen, Saturday, are figured to form an accurate key to the strength of this new Maroon team.

St. Alban's Five Downs Rockville High, 27-16

Despite a whirlwind rally in the second half, which saw Rockville High amass 15 points to its opponent's 6, St. Alban's opened its basketball season yesterday in the St. Alban's gym with a 27-to-16 triumph. The visitors experienced considerable difficulty getting accustomed to the small gym and trailed 21-to-1 at half-time.

Table Tennis Tourney.

The second annual Baltimore-Washington Intercity Table Tennis championships will be held at the Washington Table Tennis Courts, 403 Eleventh street northwest, on January 9, 10 and 12, it was announced last night. It is understood that Clarence Rees, of Washington, will defend the title he won last year.

Foxx Is Bought By Red Sox In Deal

Pitchers Leroy Parmalee and Allyn Stout, Second Baseman Al Cucinello and Outfielder Phil Weintraub.

Stout and Cuccinello were immediately sold by St. Louis to the Columbus Club of the American Association, a Cardinal farm.

Chief surprise centered about the Athletics-Red Sox deal, which was confined to the release of only Foxx and Marcum by the Athletics. Reports had it that Outfielder Roger Cramer and Shortstop Eric McNair also would be included in the wholesale shipment of Philadelphia stars to the Boston club.

Well-informed sources declared, however, that the Boston-Philadelphia trade stands as unfinished business, which will be concluded after New Year's by the inclusion of Cramer and McNair in the deal.

Mack's purpose in delaying announcement of what is believed to be the complete trade is attributed to his desire to escape the full income tax obligations the deal would entail if reckoned as a part of the club's 1935 business.

Mack Withholds Statement.

Thus, Tom Yawkey, multimillionaire owner of the nouveau riche Red Sox has dipped again into his money bags to acquire from a poorer club some of the league's outstanding talent, even as he paid $250,000 for Washington's Joe Cronin at the end of the 1934 season.

The 73-year-old Connie Mack betrayed no emotion as he parted with Foxx, the brightest star he developed in his 50-year baseball career. "I have no statement to make," said Mack. "You reporters will have to guess at the purchase price. You guessed pretty well that I would sell Foxx," he smiled.

At reports that he paid $250,000 for Foxx, Owner Tom Yawkey scoffed. To persistent questioning he declared only "that he didn't cost as much as Cronin."

Neither Mack nor Yawkey would affirm that Cramer and McNair would be included in the deal in a later transaction, but sources close to both men declared it was positively to go through.

Glaring Weakness Remedied.

With the acquisition of Foxx, Manager Joe Cronin has remedied, of course, the one glaring weakness of his Red Sox—first base. The Boston club gains in Foxx the league's greatest slugger and home-run hitter. Tops among the first basemen defensively, Foxx last year tied Hank Greenberg for the league home-run leadership with 36 homers and batted .346 to place third in that respect.

A star from the moment he stepped onto a big league diamond, at the age of 17 in 1925, when Connie Mack plucked him from a Southern Maryland farm as an apple-cheeked plowboy who could hit and catch, Foxx performed successively as a catcher and a third baseman before he was installed as the A's regular first baseman in 1928. Four years later he missed Babe Ruth's all-time home-run record by only two when he pounded out 58 homers.

In Marcum, the Red Sox acquire one of the outstanding young right-handed pitchers of the league whose record of 17 victories and 12 defeats with the eighth-place Athletics last year speaks eloquently as to his talent.

The pair shipped to the Philadelphia club—Rhodes and Savino—are comparative big league nonentities. Rhodes, a confirmed in and outer when he was with both the Yankees and the Red Sox, won but two games last year and Savino hit only .260 as a catcher for Syracuse last season.

Slightly panicky at the menacing make-up of the Red Sox, following their deal for Foxx and Marcum, the champion Tigers lost little time in closing the Simmons deal with the White Sox.

Foreseeing the need for added strength in his outfield already populated by the aging Goose Goslin and the comparatively hitless Jo-Jo White, if the challenge of the Red Sox were to be met, Manager Mickey Cochrane capitulated to the White Sox's demands for Simmons, which were believed to have started at $75,000.

Cochrane is gambling, of course, on a return to form by Simmons, who last year encountered the most dismal season of his 12-year big league career, hitting only .267 and proving a tremendous drawback to the Chicago Club, which entertained pennant visions in mid-season.

Chief Chewaki Craves More Freedom and Brass Knuckles

By George Considine.

"IT'S A CRIME. That's what it is," Chief Chewaki was sitting disconsolately with his brogans draped across Promoter Joe Turner's desk. The chief is sort of hanging around waiting for his wrestling match with one Doug Wycoff tomorrow night at the Turner arena.

"A fellow is too restricted nowadays. When you want to give the public the best you've got, somebody always comes along and says 'Don't never do that!' It seems that Promoter Turner had just cautioned the big fellow that he couldn't bring his brass knuckles or black jack to tomorrow's grapple fest.

The highlight of the chief's stormy career occurred during his fistic days when, under the name of Gypsy Daniels, he scored a knockout over Max Schmeling. He had reached an ideal with that kayo. So he quit the boxing game to cast his lot in the rassle racket.

As a rassler he has been known to enhance his repertoire of grips and grunts with the somewhat more material weapons of black jacks, brass knuckles and stove lids. On one occasion he was engaged in a buffoon battle, when his opponent cut loose with a flying tackle.

The Chief held his ground and as his opponent's head contacted the Chief's midriff, a noise went up in the auditorium that sounded like the first note of "The Anvil Chorus." The Chief held his ground, as was mentioned, but the opponent never fully recovered. He had been knocked into the land of tweet-tweet by a concealed stove lid.

Other struggle tussles on tomorrow night's card find Messrs. Browning, Detton and Kashey sporting 'round with Messrs. Szabo, Manich and Kent, respectively, but hardly respectfully.

Roosevelt Rally Stops Mt. St. Joseph's

WITH three minutes to play it looked as though Roosevelt might drop its first game of the season yesterday, but the Rough Riders came through with a belated scoring spree to knock off Mount St. Joseph's High, of Baltimore, 27 to 22, at the Roosevelt gym.

In winning their third straight victory in three starts the Rough Rilers added the Marylanders to Bethesda-Chevy Chase and Montgomery-Blair, their two previous victims.

It was anybody's game in the first half, but for most of the second it looked distinctly Baltimorean. The count was tied at 11-all at the intermission, but Mount St. Joe quickly spurted to a 19-13 lead before the third quarter had elapsed.

Spiro Kolius, Roosevelt's high-scoring forward, then took it upon himself to score in quick succession three of his five baskets to tie the count. Roosevelt was still trailing, 21-20, at the start of the last period, however, and it took a double-decker by Capt. Harry Silverman to establish a Roosevelt lead, which remained unbroken thereafter.

Although Kolius, with 10 points, led the Rough Rider offensive, it was Billy Kornick, Mount St. Joe forward, who led the scoring for both teams, tallying 13 points.

Roosevelt will go after its fourth consecutive victory Friday night, when it meets Forrest Park High, high-ranking Baltimore school. The game will be played in Baltimore.

Upsets Mark First Schoolboy Soccer

The opening divisional games yesterday in the elementary school soccer tournament conducted by the Department of Playgrounds furnished two mild surprises, the 3-2 defeat of Dent by Greenleaf, and the scoreless tie between Seaton and Burroughs. Blow, city champion, startd off strongly in its effort to repeat, defeating Madison, 4-0. Fillmore was a shade better than Murch and won, 1-0. In the semifinal round, Takoma beat Whittier, 2-1.

Dent and Greenleaf were tied, 1-1, at the end of the regulation time and required three extra periods to reach a decision, each team scoring once in the second period and the Hoover division representatives notching the winning point late in the third.

Former Palace Stars Play Brewers

RUSTY Saunders and Georgie Glasco, stars of the old Palace professional basketball team, will return to familiar scenes Sunday, when they perform for the Paterson, N. J., Club, of the American League, against the Heurich Brewers at the Heurich gym.

Saunders and Glasco, magicians in this art of handling the basketball, will play forward and guard, respectively.

Others on the invading team are Al Kellett, center; Benny Borgemann, forward, who needs little introduction to local fans, and Dave Bass, former New York University star.

Weighing 213 pounds, standing 6 feet 2, Saunders has lost none of his cunning, and is considered the most feared player in the professional league. Last year he played with Trenton and Boston.

Borgemann for years was the leading scorer in the league.

Hoyas Await First Battle Tomorrow

Colonials Confident, to Oppose Buckeyes on Road Trip.

WHILE George Washington's dribblers leave this morning for Columbus, Ohio, where they play Ohio State tomorrow night in one of the more important early season games, Catholic University's wrecking crew remains at home to play host to Roanoke tonight in the big Brookland barn. Tomorrow night Georgetown opens its campaign against Western Maryland at Tech High School.

Nine players, accompanied by Coach Bill Reinhart, assistant director of athletics, Max Farrington, and Manager Vincent Pfahler, will make the trip to Columbus for George Washington. Players going along are Hal Kiesel, Ben Goldfadden, Tommy O'Brien, Tuffy Leemans, Walter Bakum, George Freilicker, Milt Schonfeld, Clarence Berg and Pete Yurwitz.

After their flying start at the expense of Shenandoah the Colonials are confident of scoring over the highly touted Buckeyes. Kiesel, Goldfadden and O'Brien, who accounted for 42 points in the opening game, are expected to bear the brunt of the burden.

Catholic was none too impressive in its debut against Maryland State Normal, but with more practice under its belt should be smoother tonight. The Cards are speedy, they have a good eye for the bucket and with Capt. Bernie Lieb directing the attack they give promise of developing into a club good enough to uphold the standards of preceding years.

Georgetown practiced at Tech last night to get accustomed to the tricky floor, and will have another drill there tonight.

Auto Output Nears All-Time Record

Detroit, Dec. 10 (AP).—Cram's Reports, Inc., said today that automobile production totalled 93,180 units last week, predicted that December production would continue at a high rate, and added that "the probabilities are that an all-time record will be set."

The weekly figure compared with 83,358 during the previous week, when production was interrupted by the Thanksgiviing Day holiday, and with 19,347 a year ago when motorcar makers were marking time preparatory to introducing new models.

"Christmas buying of new cars will be a definite factor toward further stimulation of sales for the first time in several years," the report says.

$100,000,000 Farm Loan 3s Quickly Taken

Federal Land Bank Bonds Oversubscribed Soon After Offering.

The $100,000,000 issue of 3 per cent bonds of the Federal land banks offered to the investing public yesterday was heavily oversubscribed in New York by 10.45 a. m., according to an announcement by W. I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit Administration. The bonds were offered at 98⅜ and are callable in ten years and mature in 20 years.

Of the total amount issued $62,000,000 will be used to refund a similar amount of called bonds and the remaining amount of about $38,000,000 will be used to make new, first mortgage Federal land bank loans.

"This is the first occasion since 1930 that the Federal land banks have offered bonds to investors in any large amount for the purpose of new financing, and the response of investors to this bond issue is very gratifying," Mr. Myers said.

"For the last two years the Federal land banks have obtained funds for new loans by exchanging their bonds for Government-guaranteed bonds of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation," he continued. "This was considered as only a temporary method of marketing Federal land bank bonds. For some time the banks have anticipated returning to the investment market for their funds.

"This new Federal land bank financing reopens a direct channel of normal business relationships between farmers and investors. Long-term farm mortgage loans are made available at 4 per cent a year and under present conditions funds for making these loans are obtained by selling 3 per cent consolidated bonds of the Federal land banks secured by first farm mortgages on farms throughout the United States."

For the eleven months ended November overseas sales were 258,283 units, the highest for a similar period since 1929, and 26.5 per cent ahead of the same period last year.

Shipments of cars and trucks by the Chrysler Corporation during the first 11 months of this year were 37 per cent ahead of the corresponding 1934 period, the corporation announced today.

Break in World Silver Price Casts Its Shadow on Market

Metal Stocks Lead the Decline, Which Runs From 1 to 6 Points; Bonds Irregular; Wheat Higher.

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 10.—Investors and traders, unsettled by confusion surrounding the world price of silver, sold the metals and other shares freely today, driving the stock market down for net losses of from 1 to 6 points. While the steepest declines took place in the mines, declines of 1 to 2 or more points were scattered throughout the rest of the list. A number of specialties, however, bucked the trend for gains.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks the market receded .8 of a point to 54.7. Transactions totaled 2,370,099 compared with 2,542,330 on Monday.

At the low of the day U. S. Smelting was down 8¾ points. Later recovery closed the issue with a net loss of 6 at 101¼. Other metals down 1 to 4 or more on the reduction of the bar silver price were American Smelting at 58⅞, Cerro de Pasco at 58, Anaconda at 28¼ and Kennecott at 28½.

It was Monday's price-chipping, money experts said, which brought heavy selling into the London market. The bulk of the liquidation there, they said, came from far Eastern holders of silver who were uncertain over the U. S. Treasury buying policy.

No Bids in London

No opening price for the metal was set in the British financial capital owing to the reported absence of U. S. Treasury bids. The financial district measured doubts over the silver price structure in terms of futures in Montreal which were off 4 or more cents an ounce.

Shares that managed to finish ahead included Bayuk Cigar at 55¼, Certain-Teed preferred at 80, Collins & Aikman at 47⅜, Crucible Steel at 32, Cutler Hammer at 41, Hazel-Atlas "A" at 114, Melville Shoe at 63⅞ and Owens Illinois at 124¼.

Indications that the carloadings total for the past week would show a gain over the previous week apparently went unheeded as leading rails turned back for losses of fractions to more than a point, including Santa Fe at 57, Baltimore & Ohio at 17⅛, Pennsylvania at 31⅝, Southern Pacific at 23¾ and Union Pacific at 109¼.

Extra Dividends.

The day's crop of extra-dividend announcements included J. C. Penney, which hoisted its regular rate and tacked on an extra of $1.50. The shares closed up ¼, at 83. Howe Sound declared an extra of 75 cents, but the stock, under pressure with other metals, lost 2⅝, at 56½.

The principal item in the day's budget of industrial news was the report of U. S. Steel shipments of finished steel products of 681,820 tons in November, a drop of 4,921 tons from October. This decline was about as expected in brokerage circles. The gain over November last year amounted to more than 315,000 tons and was attributed both to gains in automobile outputs and the slow revival of heavy industry.

Among prominent equities down from 1 to 2 points were U. S. Steel at 46⅝, General Motors at 55⅛, Chrysler at 84¾, Westinghouse at 90⅛, American Can at 135½ and Case at 99¼. Coca-Cola, in contrast with its recent sharp gains, was off ¾ to 88½.

Bonds were generally lower. Wheat finished unchanged to 1⅛ cents a bushel higher. Corn rose ¼ to ⅞ cent. Cotton closed 15 cents a bale higher to 40 cents lower.

In the foreign exchange market the French franc was up .00¼ of a cent at 6.59¾. The pound sterling was unchanged at $4.93.

Hutton Resigns As Chairman Of Gen. Foods

C. M. Chester, President, Is Named as His Successor.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 10.—E. F. Hutton, Wall street banker and industrialist, has resigned as chairman of General Foods Corporation, it was announced today. C. M. Chester, president of the corporation, has been named as Hutton's successor as chairman and Clarence Francis, executive vice president, has been appointed president to succeed Chester. The office of executive vice president has been eliminated.

A statement issued by the company said that Mr. Hutton had held the position of chairman since April, 1923, and "during this period has declined to accept any compensation therefor." Mr. Chester commented that Mr. Hutton "although improving, was not in good health and that his return to active business affairs was indefinite."

"The directors" the announcement said, "expressed gratitude to Mr. Hutton for his long and useful service given at heavy personal and financial sacrifice. Mr. Hutton remains as a director of the corporation. Mr. Chester has served as president of the organization since January 24 and Mr. Francis as executive vice president since December 1931."

Mr. Hutton was said to be at his country estate at Green Pond, S. C.

New Deal Attitude.

Mr. Hutton recently attracted attention with an article in the magazine Public Utilities Fortnightly, in which he urged business to "gang up" in opposition to certain aspects of the New Deal. He explained later, however, that the article had been written several months previously and that he had changed his attitude toward the Roosevelt administration since it was written. He said he had used the expression "gang up" merely in the sense of "get together."

More than 20 years ago he married Marjorie Post, daughter of the late C. W. Post, founder of Post cereal business, which became an important unit in the General Foods combination when it was formed in 1929. They were divorced last September.

Mr. Hutton founded the New York Stock Exchange firm of E. F. Hutton & Co., in 1904, but for a number of years has been less active in the concern, and is now a special partner. He is a director of Chrysler Corporation and other large corporations.

Wheat Follows Argentine Rise

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Soaring of wheat quotations at Buenos Aires, together with evidence of big export buying of Canadian wheat, tilted the Chicago wheat market upward today. Scarcity of offerings of Argentine wheat and reduction of estimates of Argentina's new crop were given as reasons for jumps of Buenos Aires prices.

Ex. Gov. Smith Named Trustee Of Postal Tel.

Reorganization Sought for Company Under Bankruptcy Act.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 10.—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith today was appointed Federal trustee for the Postal Telegraph Corporation, now under reorganization in accordance with the bankruptcy act. The former Governor of New York, who is ill at his home, accepted the post in a telephone conversation with Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe.

Judge Coxe deferred appointment of another trustee to serve as a managing officer until representatives of the creditors could confer with Smith and make a joint recommendation.

At the opening of the hearing before Judge Coxe, Lansing P. Reed, of counsel for the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., a major stockholder in Postal, presented a petition to intervene in the proceedings. No objection was made. Reed pointed out the advisability of appointing trustees to replace the present management.

Alexander Royce, counsel for Postal, said recent operations of the company had been "encouraging," although counsel for a committee holding $5,000,000 of indenture bonds reported company losses for the first ten months of this year had been $346,000. Losses to subsidiary companies, it was added, amounted to $1,187,000 for the same period.

The decision to apply for appointment of trustees was reached by heads of two bondholders' committees—Robert Lehman, whose committee holds $23,000,000 n bonds, and Cecil P. Stewart. Postal applied for permission for reorganization under the bankruptcy act on June 14, 1935.

Bankruptcy arose from failure of Postal to earn interest charges on its collateral trust bonds and debenture stock during the past four years. Funds for payment of these charges were made available from the sale of assets and from advances from International Telephone & Telegraph, the parent company.

Mine Shares Lead Decline on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 10.—Led by selling in metal shares, the curb market yielded fractions to around 2 points today. Selling in non-ferrous issues developed soon after the market opened and was based on unsettlement of world silver prices. Liquidation quickly spread to other parts of the list. Transfers approximated 520,000 shares compared with 528,000 yesterday.

Aluminum Co. of America lost 2⅝ points at 88, while issues down 1 to 2 included Bunker Hill & Sullivan at 53, Newmont Mining at 75, Sunshine Mining at 20, Humble Oil at 58⅞ and American Gas & Electric at 37¼.

Dried Fruits Steady.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

AMERICA is going to be made "civil service conscious" if the American Federation of Government Employes has anything to do with it—and it has.

BAKER.

Lee Somers and the other powers that be in the AFGE already have started ballyhooing National Civil Service Week, set for January 12 to 18.

College presidents here and there have been asked to interest professors of economics and civil government in the movement and many clergymen have indicated they will do their part to strike at the spoils system.

All local AFGE lodges will arrange for special speeches dealing with the advantages of the merit system in governmental organizations—national, State, county and municipal.

The primary purpose of all the addresses will be to make better known accomplishments and improvements in public service made possible by the civil service system.

Civil Service Week, an annual event, is jointly sponsored by the AFGE and the Civil Service Commission, with the active co-operation of such organizations as the National Education Association, the National League of Women Voters, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the American Federation of Labor, the National Association of Letter Carriers, the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, the Railway Mail Association, the Disabled American Veterans, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Agriculture Program Tonight.

Having been featured with considerable success in a recent joint performance with the Musical and Dramatic Guild at Agriculture, the department orchestra will present a program of symphonic dance music at 8:30 p. m. today in the Agriculture auditorium. The "Nell Gwyn" dances by Edward German will be one of the features.

David Manley, tenor soloist of the department's chorus, will give several numbers, accompanied by Miss Eileen Crimmen (C). Dr. Walter Bauer (F), will conduct the orchestra, which enjoyed a successful season last summer in concerts at the Sylvan Theater.

Morris Anderson (C), of Stockton, Kans., has accepted a position with the Soil Conservation Service.

On September 17, just 20 minutes after a daughter was born to Mrs. Dillon, James Dillon left Meridian, Miss., to accept a position as senior draftsman with Soil Conservation Service. Mrs. Dillon and the infant, whom he has not seen since, joined him here this week.

George Barnes, special assistant to the chief, Soil Conservation Service, is recovering from a minor operation, it is reported at the office. He is convalescing at his home.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C appears after your name in this column call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Ed Sullivan in person, Bill Brady and other acts; screen, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea in "Splendor"); P, Loew's Palace (Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak and Fred Allen in "Thanks a Million;" also Chic Sale in "The Perfect Tribute," a specialty); or C, Loew's Columbia (third week of Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty").

Leaves have fallen from the trees;
Jack Frost rides the evening breeze—
Winter triumphs everywhere.
Soon it will be time to write
Santa letters—believe—
If we're good, perhaps, he might
Bring us thirty days of leave.

Postoffice.

Robert K. Haskell (P) and Harold C. Mann (F), both of War Department, have just obtained a patent for a tension-impact machine for testing materials to determine the breaking point by a variable speed impact.

Conciliation Service.

Q. What is the United States Conciliation Service—Maude C. Drake (F).

A. This is a branch of the Department of Labor charged with the duty of seeking peaceful settlement in any trade dispute arising between employers and employes in industry. The authority for this service is found in section 8 of the act creating the department, wherein the Secretary of Labor is authorized to act as mediator or appoint commissioners of conciliation whenever the interests of industrial peace may require it.

Commission of Fine Arts.

Q.—Who are the members of the Commission of Fine Arts?—June R. Blakman (P).

A.—Charles Moore, of Detroit, chairman; Egerton Swartwout, of New York City, vice chairman; Lee Lawrie and John M. Howells, of New York City; Gilmore D. Clarke, of White Plains, N. Y.; Eugene F. Savage, of Ossining, N. Y., and Charles A. Coolidge, of Boston. H. P. Caemmerer is secretary and administrative assistant.

Q.—Who is the head of the Procurement Division, Treasury?—Elmo V. Knuttry (C).

A.—Rear Admiral Christian Joy Peoples (Supply Corps), U. S. Navy.

Culbertson On Contract

[Mr. Culbertson continues his description of a "friendly game" he recently watched. The first hand in this series appeared yesterday.]

"Well," remarked North cheerily as the cards were being dealth for the next hand, "if there's any justice it's our turn now."

West, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 diamond	Double	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 spades [final bid]

North opened the diamond king and South made the excellent play of failing to begin an echo, playing the deuce instead. North followed instructions and made the proper shift to a low club. Declarer played the ace from dummy and then dummy's two high trumps, cursing under his breath when North showed out on the second trump lead. The ace of hearts, followed by the king and queen, revealed the 4-2 division of that suit. Declarer's case was hopeless. There was no way to avoid the loss of two diamonds, one club and one trump.

"Nice work," said North. "If you'd have echoed for a diamond continuation the club jack could have been discarded from dummy on the third round of diamonds and the contract would have been so easy that even West would have made it."

"It's a pleasure to get a partner that follows signals," complimented South, in his turn.

"When you fellows get through patting each other's backs," growled West, "maybe we can play another hand that won't be stacked in your favor!"

In all fairness, there was justice in his complaint. Admittedly, the defense had been good, but, at the same time, the cards had broken badly for the declarer.

Prospect of Nats' Deals Brightened for Myer in an even swap and Harris rightly termed the offer an insult.

Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, made a flat offer to exchange Les Tietje, his young right-hander, to the Nats for Earl Whitehill, veteran southpaw, in an even swap, but Harris turned down that deal. When Dykes brought up the name of Joe Kuhel and expressed a willingness to include First Baseman Zeke Bonura, Harris secretly listened with great interest, but offered no encouragement. He will recommend the deal to Griffith tomorrow, however.

Harris is willing to sacrifice Kuhel's superior defensive play for the added hitting the husky Bonura would bring to the club, and rates the Kuhel-Bonura edge the Nats would gain as offsetting any deficiency in the Whitehill-Tietje trade.

If a deal with the White Sox involving Bonura fails of completion, Harris is expected to talk seriously with Manager Rogers Hornsby, of the Browns, who has expressed a willingness to trade First Baseman Jack Burns. If Hornsby includes Pitcher Knott in the deal, Harris is likely to recommend to Griffith that Kuhel and a sum of cash be sent the Browns in exchange.

The Yankees, alarmed at the concentration of strength in Boston, are known to be seeking both Outfielder Jake Powell and Second Baseman Buddy Myer from the Nats, but Harris, in a talk with McCarthy today, flatly refused to consider any offer for this pair. He left with McCarthy a counter proposition that would send Manush to the Yanks' outfield in exchange for one of the better young New York pitchers.

MEN—ATTENTION!

Many men in and around Washington are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, but want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good, consistent living for themselves and their families, my company presents a splendid opportunity.

We have a new machine and to those who can within one to two weeks learn to operate it successfully, will earn $40 to $50 per week and up.

Do not confuse this with the ordinary run of ads. Come in and see for yourself. This presents a rare opportunity to men who can qualify for this work and who want and need a substantial income.

We prefer married men between the ages of 30 and 50 years who have ability to accept the responsibility to do an honest day's work.

Pair Attack Guard, Flee Tazewell Jail

Escape With Key Made From Tin Spoon.

By the Associated Press.

Tazewell, Va., Dec. 10.—Two prisoners escaped from the Tazewell Jail today by using a key whetted on the concrete floor from a tin spoon. Brown Barnett, jailer, was knocked down by the men as they rushed to freedom.

Barnett regained his feet, however, and fired at the fleeing men, Ernest Short and Charlie Roach, but missed.

Short was being held for grand jury action on a robbery charge, while Roach had served eight months of a ten-month sentence for robbery. Two prisoners in the same cell did not join in the break.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY A Wild Ride By Harry J. Tuthill

The idea! These men rushing us to that yacht so much sooner than Mr. Eldorado phoned this car would call for us. The driver is very nervy, too.
I don't remember seeing him before.
Heavenly days, why is this car tearing along at such speed?
Whoops! My head! We hit a bump in...
Listen, what direction are we going in now?
Why we're going...oh.. this speed is simply terrific.
What? Yes, that's right. Hey driver, Hey!
Imagine! These men. Pretending not to hear you...they're talking...in some foreign language.
Such crust! Hey, driver! Let me up so I can really talk to these babies.
